Security in the 21st century: US and European responses to global terrorism Patrick Wagner, 2004-10-02 Master s Thesis from the year 2004 in the subject Politics Topic Peace and Conflict Security grade 2 B University of Kent Brussels School of International Studies language English abstract Although the world stood united behind America when the dust of the collapsed twin towers of the World Trade Centre settled differences between the United States and Europe soon became apparent Europe might have supported the US in Afghanistan both politically and militarily but diverging interests already became apparent when the US sidelined NATO and preferred to lead Operation Enduring Freedom itself The dispute escalated over the US plans to continue the war on terror in Iraq Here it emerged that the US and Europe do not share the same world view While the US seem to perceive the world in Hobbesian terms and believe that military strength is the only means to achieve security Europe appears to understand security in the Kantian sense and believes that perpetual peace can be achieved The question that divided Europe and the US over Iraq then is more than a simple difference of opinion but reflects a deep philosophical division Can global security be achieved by force or through sustained dedication to a set of normative principles implemented by the world community Consequently the counterterrorism strategies formulated in Europe and the US are of a fundamentally different nature which cannot be explained merely by the discrepancy in military capabilities. If that would be the case, Europe would have begun to build up its military potential by now. Acknowledging that terrorism has become one of the most pressing political problems, David Whittaker, the aim of this paper is to compare the US and the European approach to global terrorism, establish reasons for the differences, and evaluate which approach might be more effective. As September 11 has changed our perception of security by demonstrating that even the US is, despite its unrivalled military superiority, vulnerable to attack carried out by just 19 men armed with cardboard cutters, we should remain aware that the responses we chose to these attacks reflect our dedication to human rights, the rule of law, and indeed freedom. Relying on military strength is easier than to acknowledge that terrorism is caused by a fundamentally unjust economical and political world order that markedly favours the West, yet it might ultimately prove to become more dangerous than terrorism itself as it does nothing to resolve the problem but reinforces the world order that is the cause of the problem. The Shoe Workers' Journal, 1928 Union Boot and Shoe Worker, 1928

Essay from the year 2018 in the subject Politics. Topic: Peace and Conflict. Security grade 1 language English. abstract: September 11, 2001 remains an historic phenomenon in the history of the United States as well as the whole world. In retrospect, the 9/11 terrorists' attack on the Pentagon and the World Trade Center changed the perception on terrorism and national security. In the pre-9/11, the aspect of homeland defense did not receive immense attention from a majority of people, and even some security agencies. Grannis (2002) reaffirms this aspect by stating that approaches to counter terrorism were relatively missing. Only few government officials, think tank experts, and academia showed interest in programs that focused on maintaining sustainability on domestic preparedness. Consequently, the U.S. Government in entirety did not consider domestic preparedness as one of the key priorities. However, the unprecedented terrorists' attack by the nineteen hijackers in New York and Washington, as well as the subsequent biological attack, raised concerns on instruments of national power including intelligence, diplomacy, and law enforcement. Prior to the attacks, al-Qaida's were training thousands of terrorist recruits in Afghanistan under Iraq's sponsorship, yet such aspects that threatened international security received little attention from the global security agencies. As such, it is apparent that sustainability on both domestic and international preparedness encompassed several challenges. In contrast, this aspect has changed in the post-9/11, in which the U.S. spending on homeland security has been increasing every year since 2001. However, the exclusive focus on counterterrorism approaches in order to avert other terrorist attacks seems to have diverged the focus to domestic preparedness. It is explicit that the current security climate is characterized by extensive national security programs with a decreased focus on dual use and all-hazard approaches to domestic preparedness. This presents a significant post-9/11 sustainability challenge. Therefore, this paper aims at providing a comprehensive analysis on post 9 11 sustainability challenges and present appropriate recommendations
