Dower,John Swope,2006 As one of the first American photographers to set foot on Japanese soil at the end of World War II even before Japan had officially surrendered John Swope experienced and recorded a critical peculiar and fragile moment in the history of Japan and a war torn world His powerful photographic essay is complemented by a 144 page letter that he wrote to his wife the actress Dorothy McGuire which describes in detail his experiences and emotional reactions to all that he saw and photographed Swope went to Japan as part of the elite team of Edward Steichen Naval photographers to document the release of Allied prisoners of war but he went far beyond his official duties During a three and a half week period he took photographs that vividly convey the impact of World War II on the local population and the land as well as the Allied prisoners Having visited Japan fifteen years before as a young man Swope struggled in 1945 with the numerous contradictions he observed and felt His photographs together with his words convey a poignant highly personal view of this world in limbo expressing a great sense of humanity and sensitivity for people on both sides of the conflict The book honors Swope s original intention of bringing together his photographs with the letter he wrote to his wife individual images are juxtaposed with short excerpts The book presents 114 color plates and gives insight into Swope s larger pursuit of capturing the universal human experience by also including highlights from his work as a Hollywood photographer from his Life magazine career and from his international travels from the 1930s to the 1970s American Photographer ,1981 Signs of Life Alfred Appel,1983 Time Briton Hadden,Henry Robinson Luce,1929 Shooting the Front Terrence J.
