FOCUS

The jaw structure of the cheetah is quite different from that of the tiger. The cheetah's jaw is shorter and wider, and its teeth are smaller. This is because the cheetah is a fast runner and needs to be able to catch its prey quickly. The tiger, on the other hand, is a powerful predator and needs to be able to take down its prey. This is why its jaw is so strong and its teeth are so sharp.

Another reason for the difference in jaw structure is the way the cheetah and tiger hunt. The cheetah is a sprinter and needs to be able to accelerate quickly. The tiger is a more powerful predator and needs to be able to take down its prey. This is why its jaw is so strong and its teeth are so sharp.
