Questions to Ask During Sessions

Opening up

- Tell me what brings you in today
- Tell me your best story
- Where should we begin?
- What do you want to say?

Goal setting

- On a scale from 1-10, how confident are you that you can reach this goal?
 - If less than a 7, make the goal easier
- How long can you see yourself sticking to this goal?
 - If less than 3 months, make the goal more realistic
- What would make you more confident about making these changes?
- What are some realistic steps you can take to achieve this goal?
- How can I help you succeed?

Addressing barriers to change

- What barriers do you anticipate getting in the way of you reaching this goal?
- Tell me what you feel prevents you from making these changes

Importance of change

- What are the most important things to you?
- If you don't make any changes, will you still be able to do these most important things best?
- What are some of your values? Are these values at the core of your happiness?
- Have you (been other people) stopped you from doing what you want to do?
- If you don't make any changes, where do you see yourself in 1 year from now?
- What are some of advantages for keeping things just the way they are? On the other hand, what are some reasons for making a change?

Looking to the past / Considering new perspectives

- What was things like before (short-term) (e.g., the eating disorder, diabetes, crash, weight gain)?
- What were the best and worst parts back then?
- If you could go back in time, what would you have done differently?
- If you had a time machine, what would you do differently?

The DBN MNT Nutrition Counseling Session Process

1. Client review

- Log into your DBN and create your client's Nutrition Assessment Form
- Understand and review your client's information in your client's file
 - Check to see that information is complete for a full client. The client should be you (not anyone else) working in a facility if the client is not a trainee. If you are not working in a facility, you should be the person who has the most information about your client's history (not your client's parents or other people who are not your client).
 - Contact the client to review their information at least 24-48 hours in advance to correct errors for the session. If you do not fix the information, your client might receive information when the session starts.

2. Prepare relevant educational material and look up any information that you are not familiar with

- For clients who might need to read educational material, you should have it ready to go on your computer or look up the information on the DBN.

3. Conduct nutrition counseling session with client

- During the session, you will spend 1-2 hours (if you have one specific goal, do more about meeting families and up to 1.5 hours of parent-led eating disorder, anxiety, or other mental health topics). The time they are devoted to insurance/billing/other issues
 - The first 15-20 minutes of the session should be spent on reviewing, where the first part of the session is reviewing, report and collecting information (DBN) issues
 - Review report and discuss for client. The goal of this visit is to understand where the client is, where they are now, and where they want to be.
 - Conduct thorough review of information and discuss with client. Review eating history, recent data on medical and lab, current medications, GI, weight issues, mental health, stress, strength, activities, food habits, 24-hour food log.
 - Discuss eating patterns.
 - Then, the second part focuses on planning and goal setting (15-30 minutes)
