Steven Farmer

The Wounded Male:

The Wounded Male Steven Farmer, 1991 Modern men are wounded by historical and cultural developments as well as by specific family problems Traditional masculinity is a straitjacket that forces men to repress all their emotions under an I can handle it facade a facade that encourages men to become emotionally numb unable to feel joy as well as sadness But men don't have to live this way THE WOUNDED MALE describes the sources and consequences of the many wounds men receive from society and family including the father wound how the physical or emotional absence of a father or a father as rigid disciplinarian can profoundly affect a growing boy and the mother wound which is rooted in the extremes of too much mothering engulfing or too little mothering abandoning Farmer personalizes his analysis with examples from his own life and the lives of other men He shows that healing the wounds of manhood is not a one shot deal but a long slow journey of self discovery Whether you are just setting out on that journey or wish to travel farther and deeper you will find THE WOUNDED MALE an indispensable companion

Violence, Visual Culture, and the Black Male Body Cassandra Jackson, 2011-04-13 From early photographs of disfigured slaves to contemporary representations of bullet riddled rappers images of wounded black men have long permeated American culture While scholars have fittingly focused on the ever present figure of the hypermasculine black male little consideration has been paid to the wounded black man as a persistent cultural figure This book considers images of wounded black men on various stages including early photography contemporary art hip hop and new media Focusing primarily on photographic images Jackson explores the wound as a specular moment that mediates power relations between seers and the seen Historically the representation of wounded black men has privileged the viewer in service of white supremacist thought At the same time contemporary artists have deployed the figure to expose and disrupt this very power paradigm Jackson suggests that the relationship between the viewer and the viewed is not so much static as fluid and that wounds serve as intricate negotiations of power structures that cannot always be simplified into the condensed narratives of victims and victimizers Overall Jackson attempts to address both the ways in which the wound has been exploited to patrol and contain black masculinity as well as the ways in which twentieth century artists have represented the wound to disrupt its oppressive implications Association Men ,1916 Men at War Stephen Schofield,1920 Blackwood's Magazine ,1918 *California.
