Any IT professional looking to the future of their enterprise network deployment will benefit from the advice, tips, and reliable information contained in this resource. The book covers all the important security issues that are top of mind in today's IT world as well as troubleshooting practices to help get issues resolved in less time. Abstract: We describe the formal verification of a simple compiler using the HOL theorem proving system. The language and microprocessor considered are a subset of the structured assembly language Vista and the VIPER microprocessor respectively. We describe how our work is directly applicable to a family of languages and compilers and discuss how the correctness theorem and verified compiler fit into a wider context of ensuring that object code is correct. We first show how the compiler correctness result can be formally combined with a proof system for application programs. We then show how our verified compiler, despite not being written in a traditional programming language, can be used to produce compiled code. We also discuss how a dependable implementation might be obtained.

Arizona Intelligent Vehicle Research Program Stephen R. Owen, 2001. This Phase One report documents a three-year research program by the Arizona Transportation Research Center to study possible practical applications of vehicle and infrastructure-based technologies. The project has reviewed, evaluated, and demonstrated Intelligent Vehicle and Automated Highway System concepts that may improve the safety and efficiency of Arizona's highway system, particularly in winter maintenance operations. The key accomplishment of Phase One was to develop a research partnership with the California Department of Transportation Caltrans in their Advanced Snowplow ASP program. The Caltrans prototype plow, guided by discrete magnetic markers in the roadway, features lane position indication, lane departure warning, and a forward collision warning radar system.
