Peers celebrated Russia Day at party with Putin's man in London

Robert Foy
Peers celebrated Russia Day at a party in the House of Lords on Tuesday night. The event was held in the presence of Lord Stubbings, the Russian ambassador to the UK, and other members of the House of Lords.

However, Boris, a Conservative peer who advised David Cameron's government, said that he was unable to host Boris because of his "constitutional" issues. They said Russia is "exceptional" in the region.

Boris, 60, a former nuclear scientist, said that he was "honoured" to be invited to the party. He said that he had made a "big mistake" in 2002, when he advised the government to invade Iraq.

"I don't want to be independent, which they have done ever since they became a nation," he said. "I don't want to be independent, which they have done ever since they became a nation."

Stubbings, 64, a former peer of John Major's government, said that he had refused to join the government in 2002 because he did not want to be involved in the Iraq war.

Among them was Chris Willis, a 14-year-old father of a baby son, who died of cancer after working in a school.
