Spatial Cognition, 2005 Spatial Cognition IV, Reasoning, Action, Interaction Christian Freksa, Markus Knauff, Bernd Krieg-Brückner, Bernhard Nebel, Thomas Barkowsky, 2005-02-22 This is the fourth volume in a series of books dedicated to basic research in spatial cognition. Spatial cognition is a field that investigates the connection between the physical spatial world and the mental world. Philosophers and researchers have proposed various views concerning the relation between the physical and the mental worlds. Plato considered pure concepts of thought as separate from their physical manifestations while Aristotle considered the physical and the mental realms as two aspects of the same substance. Descartes a dualist discussed the interaction between body and soul through an interface organ and thus introduced a functional view that presented a challenge for the natural sciences and the humanities. In modern psychology the relation between the physical and the cognitive space has been investigated using thorough experiments and in artificial intelligence we have seen views as diverse as problems can be solved on a representation of the world and a representation of the world is not necessary. Today's spatial cognition work establishes a correspondence between the mental and the physical worlds by studying and exploiting their interaction. It investigates how mental space and spatial reality join together in understanding the world and in interacting with it. The physical and representational aspects are equally important in this work. Almost all topics of cognitive science manifest themselves in spatial cognition.

The Effects of Context on Multidimensional Spatial Cognitive Models Edwin Gene Dupnick, 1979 Spatial Information Theory, 1993 An Empirical Approach to the Experience of Architectural Space Gerald Franz, 2006 quantified in generic dimensions additionally an experimental method is required that provides for reproducible and valid empirical data. Here in particular caveats and chances when using virtual reality VR technology for architectural simulation are discussed. The following chapter reviews the current state of theories and research on affective responses to architecture. Subsequently four empirical studies are presented that test the previously conceptualized methodological framework and explore emotional influences of various basic architectural design aspects. Three alternative approaches for the quantitative description of architecture are developed either based on image processing lists of architectural elements or Space Syntax methods. Finally the issue of potential interactions between different design aspects is discussed and empirically tested leading to a plausible framework model for the integration of individual factors. Taken together a viable approach to the experience of architectural space is outlined promising novel insights into the emotional meaning of architecture

Boletim Internacional de Bibliografia Sobre Educaçao, 1986 Spatial Orientation Herbert L. Pick, Linda P. Acredolo, 1983-03 How do people know where in the world they are How do they find their way about These are the sort of questions about spatial orientation with which this book is concerned Staying spatially oriented is a pervasive aspect of all behavior Animals must find their way through their environment searching efficiently for food and returning to their home areas and many species have developed very sophisticated sensing apparatus for helping them do this Even little children know their way around quite complex environments They remember where they put things and are able to retrieve them with little trouble Adults in societies across the world have developed complex navigational systems for helping them find their way over long distances with few distinctive landmarks People across the world use their languages to communicate about spatial orientation in problems of simple direction giving and spatial descriptions as well as problems of long range navigation
