How increases in Automation Support Manufacturing Productivity

The increase in demand for manufacturing goods after 2020 prompted an increase in automation. The sought manufacturing employment rose from 10.5 million in 2019 to 11.5 million in 2022, although growth has slowed in a slower. Despite U.S. employment growth leveling off, its opening to manufacturing levels is modest, with a limited number of jobs. To overcome this, manufacturers have turned to automation. These increases in employment and automation appear to have exceeded the previous trend of declining manufacturing productivity.

Interest for manufacturing goods rebounded following 2020.

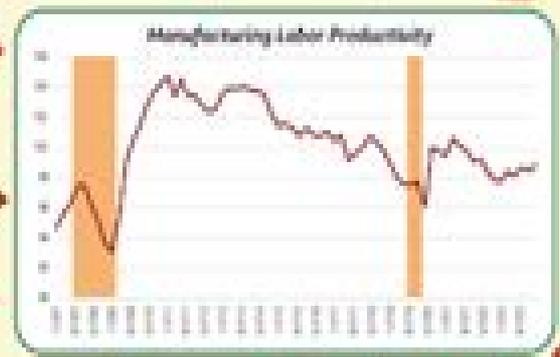

Investment in manufacturing equipment is more significant overall.

Interest among consumers in manufacturing equipment and tools is increasing.

The early and significant and sustained investment in manufacturing productivity is key.
