Glucose metabolism

Glucose is the main source of energy for the body's cells. It is transported in the blood from the liver to the cells. In the cells, glucose is broken down into pyruvate, which can then be used to produce energy. The liver also stores glucose as glycogen, which can be released into the blood when needed.

Glucagon signals the liver to convert glycogen to glucose and release the glucose into the blood.

Function of insulin

Insulin is a hormone that allows glucose to enter the cells. It is produced by the beta cells of the pancreas. In people with diabetes, the pancreas does not produce enough insulin, or the body's cells do not respond properly to the insulin that is produced.

Action of insulin

Type I

In Type I diabetes, the pancreas produces very little or no insulin. This means that glucose cannot enter the cells, and it builds up in the blood. This can lead to serious complications if not managed.

Type II

In Type II diabetes, the body's cells do not respond properly to the insulin that is produced. This means that glucose cannot enter the cells, and it builds up in the blood. This can lead to serious complications if not managed.

Normal

The insulin hormone allows glucose to enter the cells and be used for energy.

Glucose

Glucose

Insulin stimulates cells to take up glucose

The beta cells of the pancreas convert it into glucose and store it.

What is diabetes?

Diabetes is a chronic condition that affects the way the body uses glucose. There are two main types: Type 1 and Type 2. In Type 1, the body does not produce enough insulin. In Type 2, the body's cells do not respond properly to the insulin that is produced.

- ### Symptoms of diabetes
- Increased thirst and hunger
  - Increased urination
  - Blurred vision
  - Slow-healing sores
  - Skin infections
  - Unexplained fatigue, weight loss, and mood changes

Health complications

Kidney damage

High blood sugar can damage the kidneys over time. This can lead to kidney disease, which may require dialysis or a kidney transplant.

Vision problems

High blood sugar can affect the eyes, leading to blurred vision and, in some cases, blindness.

Nerve damage

High blood sugar can damage the nerves, leading to numbness, tingling, and pain, especially in the feet.

Treatment and healthy lifestyle changes

Diabetes treatment involves a combination of medication, diet, and exercise. For Type 1 diabetes, insulin is essential. For Type 2 diabetes, lifestyle changes and medication are key. Regular monitoring of blood sugar levels is important for all types.
