Understanding FDI-Assisted Economic Development Sanjaya Lall,Rajneesh Narula,2013-09-13 It is nowadays well accepted that both economic growth and development are highly dependent on improving not just the availability of capital but also access to technological capabilities infrastructure and resources This has gone hand in hand with an increasing economic liberalization of most developing countries The role of the MNE as a viable source of both capital and technology is one of the key features of this new openness In the process of embracing FDI as a solution to the myriad of economic ills something even the World Bank has begun to do little attempt is made to understand the rationale and the costs associated with this policy stance Simply put FDI is not a condition sine qua non for development Too much emphasis has been placed on attracting FDI and not on understanding how to optimise the benefits for the host economy This volume aims to encourage and promote research related to these issues This volume was previously published as a special issue of the European Journal of Development Research

The Political Economy of Hemispheric Integration Diego Sánchez-Ancochea,Kenneth C. Shadlen,2008-06-15 The 1990s and the early years of the 21st century have witnessed the emergence and proliferation of regional and bilateral trade agreements RBTAs between developed and developing countries in the Americas These agreements typically liberalize trade in most goods and services and they also coordinate measures on a broad range of economic policy areas beyond trade The first and most prominent of these agreements is the North American Free Trade Agreement NAFTA which the USA Canada and Mexico signed in the early 1990s In subsequent years the USA has concluded agreements with a number of countries in Latin America and the Caribbean The contributors to this book evaluate the economics and politics of this new pattern of North South integration in the Americas The book begins by considering the developmental implications of this new pattern of integration Such agreements provide Latin American and Caribbean countries with significantly improved access to the US market yet purchasing such preferential access via negotiation of RBTAs agreements with the US obliges countries to adopt US style practices in areas such as the management of inward foreign investment and intellectual property The first half of the volume addresses these issues focusing on the challenges derived from new patterns of foreign investment the rise of China as an exporting power the emergence of a new regime for investment protection and the multiplicity of intrusive forms of economic governance embodied in regional and global trade regimes The second half of the book focuses on both the proliferation of RBTAs and critically the limits to the spread of such agreements The authors consider the interests in integration and strategies for negotiating RBTAs from the perspective of a variety of actors deploying a range of analytic approaches The chapters assess the capacities of the US to fulfil ambitions for integration the strategy of Canada to both maintain close relations with the US and counterbalance its neighbor s preponderant influence throughout the region the response of smaller countries in Central America and the Caribbean reactions toward integration of the larger South American countries in Mercosur and the broader question of how developing countries form coalitions and design collective

MNEs Investment Policy and Sustainable Development language English abstract My paper will address the development of the Chinese economy and in which way the regulation of foreign direct investment FDI helped China to overcome a financial trough and to swing themselves up to one of the biggest players on the global market Therefore my guiding question will be How has the Chinese regulation of FDI from the late 1970s until the 2000s boosted the economy of the country My topic and research question are relevant because the economic evolution China has been through is unique even though its growth model was like those of other Asian or Communist countries and other states like the UDSSR failed to transition their market into a more liberal system The astonishing success story that China has written was greatly influenced by the opening to FDI whilst still having restrictions on it to channel it into the right sectors for developing the country This essay is based on the neoclassical growth theory which seems to fit the most since the three driving factors of this theory are labour capital and technology which are all important factors of China s economic growth To explain its case I will mainly use academic literature from researchers specialized on Chinese economy a scientific article and a study I will use data from the Worldbank and from various surveys that Long evaluated to point out and underline the growth of China s economy I found that FDI clearly helped to spur the rise of the Chinese economy even though the study of Ford did not find direct benefits of FDI in China in the long run but admits positive indirect effects My findings in this paper are therefore that the applied regulative measures were effective at the time but might not be sustainable if they wanted to use this set of regulations in the future

Trade and Development Report 2006 United Nations Conference on Trade and Development,2006 Since 2002 world economic expansion has had a strong positive impact on growth and helped support progress towards the United Nations Millennium Development Goals MDGs Most developing countries have benefited from this growth momentum as a result of strong demand for their exports of primary commodities and to an increasing extent of manufactures However global economic imbalances continue to pose a risk to the outlook of the world economy Some improvements in market access provision of debt relief and commitments by donors to substantial increases in ODA as well as new opportunities to benefit from FDI and increasing migrants remittances have benefited individual countries In order for all developing countries to reach the MDGs and to reduce the large gap in living standards with the more advanced economies the global partnership for development stipulated in Goal 8 of the MDGs needs to be strengthened further Much depends on the ability of developing countries to adopt more proactive policies in support of capital formation structural change and technological upgrading and on the latitude available to them in light of international rules and disciplines The Trade and Development Report 2006 offers relevant ideas and general principles for designing macroeconomic sectoral and trade policies that can help developing countries to succeed in today s global economic environment Particular attention is given to policies that support the creative forces of markets and the entrepreneurial dimension of investment

Economic Report on Africa 2006 ,2007-02 This publication is the 7th in an annual series that reviews the continent s economic performance and near term prospects It finds that continuing the economic recovery since the mid 1990s African countries generally recorded strong growth in 2005 a major turnaround after decades of economic stagnation However growth remains uneven across countries and in many countries fast growth has not been accompanied by substantial gains in employment or poverty reduction There are a number of imbalances which constrain the ability of African countries to accelerate and sustain growth between exports and imports between resource inflows and debt payments and between domestic savings and domestic investment African countries thus need to mobilise more domestic and external financial resources including official and private capital flows to fill the financing gaps in order to accelerate growth and sustain higher levels of growth This year s report focuses on how better managed capital flows could help African countries achieve their development goals CEPAL Review ,2013
