The Making of Human Concepts Denis Mareschal, Paul C. Quinn, S. E. G. Lea, 2010 Human adults appear different from other animals in their ability to form abstract mental representations that go beyond perceptual similarity In short they can conceptualize the world This apparent uniqueness leads to an immediate puzzle WHEN and HOW does this abstract system come into being To answer this question we need to explore the origins of adult concepts both developmentally and phylogenetically When does the developing child acquire the ability to use abstract concepts Does the transition occur around 2 years with the onset of symbolic representation and language Or is it independent of the emergence of language When in evolutionary history did an abstract representational system emerge Is there something unique about the human brain How would a computational system operating on the basis of perceptual associations develop into a system operating on the basis of abstract relations Is this ability present in other species but masked by their inability to verbalise abstractions Perhaps the very notion of concepts is empty and should be done away with altogether This book tackles the age old puzzle of what might be unique about human concepts Intuitively we have a sense that our thoughts are somehow different from those of animals and young children such as infants Yet if true this raises the question of where and how this uniqueness arises What are the factors that have played out during the life course of the individual and over the evolution of humans that have contributed to the emergence of this apparently unique ability This volume brings together a collection of world specialists who have grappled with these questions from different perspectives to try to resolve the issue It includes contributions from leading psychologists neuroscientists child and infant specialists and animal cognition specialists Taken together this story leads to the idea that there is no unique ingredient in the emergence of human concepts but rather a powerful and potentially unique mix of biological abilities and personal and social history that has led to where the human mind now stands A must read for students and researchers in the cognitive sciences

The

Complex Mind David McFarland, Keith Stenning, Maggie McGonigle, 2012-05-17 Combining the study of animal minds artificial minds and human evolution this book examine the advances made by comparative psychologists in explaining the intelligent behaviour of primates the design of artificial autonomous systems and the cognitive products of language evolution

Relational Frame Theory Steven C. Hayes, Dermot Barnes-Holmes, Bryan Roche, 2005-11-30 This volume goes beyond theory and gives the empirical and conceptual tools to conduct an experimental analysis of virtually every substantive topic in human language and cognition both basic and applied It challenges behavioral psychology to abandon many of the specific theoretical formulations of its most prominent historical leader in the domain of complex human behavior especially in human language and cognition and approach the field from a new direction It will be of interest to behavior theorists cognitive psychologists therapists and educators

Journal of the Experimental Analysis of Behavior ,1991

The Psychology of Private Events Alfred Jacobs, Lewis B. Sachs, 2013-09-11 The Psychology of Private Events Perspectives on Covert Response Systems provides evidence that the assessment and manipulation of private events such as thoughts feelings and images facilitates the prediction and control of human behavior The individual contributions represent a variety of approaches to theorizing and research into private events and to the clinical applications or potential applications which have been generated by such study The authors have addressed themselves in creative and ingenious ways to such diverse topics as creating resistance to temptation developing feelings of attraction to appropriate sex objects training people to experience less pain and having mental hospital patients practice being happier This book will be of primary interest to students and teachers of psychology particularly those interested in behaviorally oriented clinical research and practice Other professionals and teachers in the social sciences may also find it useful to become aware of the newer trends in psychology
