naphthylamin colors This base has in its behavior and reactions a considerable resemblance to aniline and when oxidized in a corresponding manner it has already yielded a series of greys browns and modes Another reaction not concerned with the fixation of colors has been pointed out by Schmid and Baldensperger These chemists have succeeded in producing magenta with aniline nitrobenzol and small quantities of vanadium The last substance plays here the same part as in the formation of aniline black It transfers the oxygen of the nitrobenzol to the aniline just as in aniline blacks it transfers the oxygen of the chlorate of potash to the aniline An interesting fact has been recently observed by Professor Journal of the Textile Institute Textile Institute (Manchester, England),1923 List of members in v 1 8 Textile Chemist and Colorist ,1994
