Searching the Heart Karen Lystra, 1992-06-25 In January 1862 Charles Godwin courted Harriet Russell ultimately unsuccessfully with the following lines Like cadences of inexpressibly sweet music your kind words came to me causing every nerve to vibrate as though electrified by some far off strain of heavenly harmony Almost ten years later Albert Janin upon receiving a letter from his beloved Violet Blair responded with I kissed your letter over and over again regardless of the small pox epidemic at New York and gave myself up to a carnival of bliss before breaking the envelope And in October 1883 Dorothea Lummis wrote candidly to her husband Charles I like you to want me dear and if I were only with you I would embrace more than the back of your neck be sure In Karen Lystra's richly provocative book Searching the Heart we hear the voices of Charles Albert Dorothea and nearly one hundred other nineteenth century Americans emerge from their surprisingly open intimate and emotional love letters While historians of nineteenth century America have explored a host of private topics including courtship marriage birth control sexuality and sex roles they have consistently neglected the study of romantic love Lystra fills this gap by describing in vivid detail what it meant to fall in love in Victorian America Based on a vast array of love letters the book reveals the existence of a real openness even playfulness between male and female lovers which challenges and expands more traditional views of middle class private life in Victorian America Lystra refutes the common belief that Victorian men and women held passionlessness as an ideal in their romantic relationships Enabling us to enter the hidden world of Victorian lovers the letters they left behind offer genuine proof of the intensity of their most private interactions feelings behaviors and judgments Lystra discusses how Victorians anthropomorphized love letters treating them as actual visits from their lovers insisting on reading them in seclusion sometimes kissing them as Albert does with Violet s and even taking them to bed She also explores how courtship rituals which included the setting and passing of tests of love succeeded in building unique emotional bonds between lovers and how middle class views of romantic love which encouraged sharing knowledge and intimacy gave women more power in the home Through the medium of love letters Searching the Heart allows us to enter unnoticed the Victorian bedroom and parlor We will leave with a different view of middle class Victorian America

Drew and Madeline Farthering come to Bloodworth Park Lodge in the midst of the Yorkshire moors a place as moody and mysterious as a Brontë hero. There have been several worrisome incidents out on the moor: property destroyed, fires started, sheep and cattle scattered, and worst of all, the vicar has been found dead on the steps of the church. Drew's friend is obviously smitten with his bride of eight months, though it's hard to imagine what she sees in the awkward man. Drew can't help wondering if her affections lie more with the man's money and estate while her romantic interests focus on their fiery Welsh gamekeeper. As the danger grows ever closer, it's up to Drew to look past his own prejudices, determine what is really going on, and find the killer before it's too late.
