War Without Borders Gabriel Marcella,2008 Unprotected borders are a serious threat to the security of a number of states around the globe The combination of weak states ungoverned space terrorism and international criminal networks make a mockery of the Westphalian system of international order Latin American countries are experiencing all of these maladies in varying degrees The Andean region is under assault by a different kind of war that defies borders In this context Dr Gabriel Marcella analyzes the lessons to be learned from the Colombian attack against the clandestine camp of the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia which was located at an isolated area within Ecuador on March 1 2008 This single incident and its aftermath had profound reverberations throughout the Hemisphere The events leading to the attack illuminate the vulnerabilities of states societies and the international community to the actions of substate groups ocnducting criminal activities Accordingly the hemispheric community of nations needs to develop better ways to anticipate and resolve conflicts The United States plays a critical role in the emerging security environment of the Andean region Yet a superpower is often unaware of hte immense influence it hasa with respect to small countries like Ecuador which is trying to extricate itself from becoming a failed state The author recommends that the United States manage its complex agenda with sensitivity and balance its support for Ecuador This monograph is a valuable contribution to the strategy debate on how the United States can forge stronger cooperation and mutual support with Latin American partners
