Wartime Schools:

Wartime Schools Gerard Giordano, 2004 The politically conservative educators of World War II dramatically and rapidly altered policies programs schedules learning materials classroom activities and the content of academic courses They motivated students to salvage materials sell war stamps grow crops learn about wartime issues and take pride in patriotism They prepared millions of people for the armed services and the defense industries These accomplishments were possible because the educators were supported by an unprecedented alliance that included teachers school administrators industrialists military personnel government leaders and the President himself After the war conservative educators continued to portray themselves as home front warriors waging a life threatening battle against enduring global dangers A terrified public accepted this depiction and continued to back them for decades Armed With Knowledge: the Wartime Schools at Harvard Business School, 1941-1946 Parker J. Neal, 2016 This thesis examines the experiences of the Army and Navy student officers who attended the six Wartime Schools hosted at Harvard Business School during World War II and seeks to answer the question in what ways did the Wartime Schools students engage with and become part of the Harvard community Drawing upon the official University records in the Harvard Archives as well as thousands of letters and articles the Wartime Schools students wrote and published in the Harvard Crimson student newspaper between 1940 and 1946 it analyzes the student experience in a four part framework of academics athletics extracurricular activities and social life When combined the official records and the Wartime Schools students own writings clearly show a group of student officers who were deeply engaged in all aspects of campus life who became part of the HBS University and broader Boston community and who simultaneously balanced their obligations to the military with the academic demands of Harvard Business School Our Schools in War Time—and After Arthur D. Dean, 2021-05-19 In Our Schools in War Time and After Arthur D Dean offers an astute examination of the American education system during a tumultuous historical period marked by war and societal change Utilizing a straightforward yet persuasive literary style Dean situates his analysis within a broader discourse on the impact of global conflict on educational institutions The book serves as both a historical account and a philosophical inquiry reflecting on how wartime challenges reshaped curricula pedagogy and the very purpose of schools in their aftermath His observations resonate deeply with contemporary issues within education making it a seminal text for understanding the interplay between societal upheaval and learning environments Arthur D Dean a prominent educational reformer and advocate for progressive teaching methods drew upon his extensive background in pedagogy and administration as he penned this illuminating work His experiences during World War I combined with a keen awareness of the socio political landscape of his time inspired him to address the urgent need for schools to adapt to a world fraught with change Dean s commitment to fostering critical thinking and civic responsibility underpins the thematic essence of the book Readers interested in the historical evolution of education or those concerned with the current state of our schools will find Dean's work both enlightening and essential. This book not only chronicles a pivotal moment in educational history but also poses vital questions regarding the role of schools in cultivating informed citizens amid adversity. Its insights are particularly poignant for educators, policymakers, and anyone invested in the future of American education.

Wartime Schooling and Education Policy in the Second World War Sarah Van Ruyskensvelde, 2016-08-18

This book deals with the development of private secondary schooling during the Second World War in Belgium. It focuses on how the German occupier used education to gain acceptance of the regime and discusses the attitudes of Belgian education authorities, schools, teachers, and pupils towards the German occupation. Suggesting that the occupation forced Belgian education authorities such as the Roman Catholic Church to take certain positions, the book explores the wartime experiences and memories of pupils and teachers. It explains that the German Culture Department was relatively weak in establishing total control over education and that Catholic schools were able to maintain their education project during the war. However, the book also reveals that in some cases the German occupation did not need total control over education in order to find support for some authoritarian ideas As such Van Ruyskenvelde s analysis presents a nuanced view of the image of the Catholic Church schools teachers and pupils as mere victims of war A Wartime Program in Social Studies for New England Schools Harvard University.
