WORD PERFECT: LITERACY IN THE COMPUTER AGE. Myron C. Tuman. Pittsburgh: University of Pittsburgh Press, 1992, xi + 150 pp.

Reviewed by Vance Stevens

It is misleading that the title of this book mimics the name of a leading word processing program, as this book is not at all about word processing, except perhaps where word processing merges with fonts and graphics in desktop publishing. This book is about how people's perceptions of literacy have changed over the centuries as social forces work in conjunction with technology, and how these perceptions are changing now.

In particular, this book examines the impact, in a world emerging from an era of print literacy, of computer-based technologies on our concept of literacy. It extrapolates to a world in which networked writers and readers commonly have access to not only text, but to sound, video, and graphics drawn from databases hyper-linked throughout the "docuverse." It gauges the impact on literacy of reading and writing via hypertext, where authors are anonymous, when the purpose of reading and writing is instrumental, when attention spans are short and zapping is second nature, and when users of these technologies have grown distant from the disciplined thinking inherent to print literacy, which Tuman suggests has "exhausted itself" (p. 138) despite its appeal to classicists steeped in its vicissitudes.

The first literate Man excelled in memorization, and though writing may have initially assisted in mnemonics, it eventually obviated the need to memorize. Similarly, printing first sought to replicate the task of manuscript writers, which was to copy out and disseminate standard works. But these failed to enhance the economic progress of the industrial age, when writers tried to "embody a new or personal understanding of the world" which readers sought to comprehend. (p. 18) As the expression of intimate, critical thought came to be appreciated, reading became something that the individual did in isolation to lift himself above the mediocrity of the less literate masses.

More recently, social forces and technological developments are again revolutionizing the way language and communication skills are used and taught. Whereas the paradigmatic text in college composition has heretofore been the well-wrought essay, the more catchy newsletter could become a more appro-
