Workers Attitudes To Technology:

Workers' Attitudes and Technology, Workers' Attitudes and Technology Dorothy Wedderburn, Rosemary Crompton, 1972-07-20 First published in 1922 this volume aimed to contribute to our understanding of the complexities which shape attitudes and behaviour at work Based on material obtained from a survey of workers employed by a single firm who operate production systems as widely as different as continuous flow chemical production and yarn spinning this book highlights features of the production system which are crucial in influencing attitudes and behaviour within the work setting Through a comparison of craftsmen and semi skilled workers it also illustrates the influence of differences of expectations upon work attitudes and behaviour The authors reject any approach which could be called technologically determinist but nonetheless seek to show that a comparative approach to the study of behaviour in organizations may still fruitfully take as its starting point technology and the systems of control which are devised for the planning and execution of the task New Technology Great Britain. Work Research Unit, 1979 Work and Technology Marie R. Haug, Jacques Dofny, 1977 Conference report in occupational sociology dealing with effects of technological change on employees attitudes job satisfaction and working conditions contains theoretical discussion and experimental data relating to workers self management manual workers professional workers middle management etc and discusses problems of the future such as increasing leisure and structural unemployment Bibliography after each chapter flow charts and statistical tables Conference held in Toronto 1974 Technology, Employment Practices and Workers Yasumitsu Nihei, 1979 Comparison of technology personnel management and employees attitudes resulting from a survey in cotton spinning textile industries in Hong Kong Taiwan China Malaysia Thailand and the Philippines discusses occupational structure and wage structure effects of technology on management techniques worker Motivation and job satisfaction and considers issues relating to workers adaptation human relations educational level labour turnover etc Bibliography pp 135 and 136 and statistical tables

Technology and Planned Organizational Change James Chapman Taylor, 1971 Exploratory study of the causal influence of technology on planned behavioural and social change efforts directed toward greater worker involvement within industrial enterprises contributes to social research methodology in the field of occupational psychology analyses motivational and human relations aspects of employees attitudes to innovation suggests that fewer behavioural constraints and greater peer leadership are manifest in group work of sophisticated technology and includes a literature survey
