Aquatic Animal Nutrition Christian E. W. Steinberg,2025-08-11 Based on positive experiences in human nutrition and healthy aging individual and combined plant secondary metabolites are added to aquafeeds The main compounds used are carotenoids polyphenols terpenes and various alkaloids The pile of supplementation studies with beneficial results is growing rapidly These benefits include increased immunity pathogen resistance or improved gut microbiome diversity However a variety of adverse results cannot be ignored Overall in Aquatic Animal Nutrition research this is another area of that is still in its early stages as with supplementation of plant preparations Aquatic Animal Nutrition Plant Preparations a robust and guiding hypothesis for supplementation is not apparent and graded dosing is rarely used especially in the low dose range Often the high doses used lead to the classification of various compounds as anti nutritional However appropriate low dose supplementation demonstrates that and how aquatic animals can cope with anti nutritional factors within their adaptive response indicating that even these compounds may have some nutritional value In addition knowledge of the underlying mechanisms of the adaptive response may provide physiological transcript omic and epigenetic means to more sustainably utilize even this worthless food source The importance of the intestinal microflora is becoming increasingly clear and points to the imperative need to include gut microbiota in replacement studies Based on the few epigenetic studies currently available the importance of these processes is demonstrated The need to integrate such approaches into future studies is emphasized The so called hologenomics approach is inevitable Supplementing aquafeed with terrestrial plant material can introduce toxins and endocrine disruptors The addition of adsorptive compounds clay minerals or functional feed ingredients prebiotics probiotics can at least partially mitigate the adverse effects
