

2. Arbitrary boundaries continued...

- 'arbitrary' borders created multitude of problems for post-colonial governments
- Borders do not make economic sense
 - Initial disruption to lines of communication and trade
 - Longer-term problems: 14 African countries being landlocked
 - In terms of trade, this puts a state at a significant disadvantage
 - Have to rely on their neighbours to transport the bulk of their imports and exports
 - several states without significant resources from which to build their economies
 - no country can secure its future without an economic foundation
- Artificial boundaries precipitated political and social problems
 - Colonial borders cut through existing political and social units; communities split
 - Example: Somali people scattered among five sovereign states: British Somaliland, Italian Somaliland, French Somaliland, Ethiopia, and Kenya
 - colonial rule 'dehumanised' Africa's borders
