Skiing Techniques:

Backcountry Skiing Martin Volken, Scott Schell, Margaret Wheeler, 2007 For intermediate to advanced backcountry skiers Includes trip planning navigation fitness and avalanche safety information in addition to techniques Provides advice on how to make well informed backcountry decisions Martin Volken and his co authors provide skiers with all the tools and knowledge they need to safely and successfully travel in the mountain backcountry The guide features intermediate to advanced techniques for ski touring and ski mountaineering from planning backcountry trips to perfecting turns in rolling terrain and mastering uphill climbing For those skiers ready for a more technical high alpine environment they draw on traditional mountaineering skills including roped climbing setting protection anchors using ice axes climbing on bare rock and more In addition to mastering techniques Backcountry Skiing also features information on recent evolutions in ski equipment avalanche safety tips a primer on mountain weather and glaciers trip planning tools a discussion of emergency situations nutrition and fitness advice and winter camping basics Throughout this guide a special emphasis is put on being well informed and making good decisions whenever you strap on your skis and skins and head out into the backcountry

Ski Skills Andrzej Peszek, 2011 How to improve technique and prepare for the ski season

Human Movement and Motor Control in the Natural Environment Peter A Federolf, Maurice Mohr, Thorsten Stein, Gert-Jan Pepping, Steven van Andel, Gillian Weir, 2023-06-08 The basic understanding of human movement and control of human movement stems largely from laboratory measurements where human movement can be quantified with high precision and accuracy but where the artificial environment compromises ecological validity A good example for this issue was demonstrated in a recent investigation specifically that the walking gait pattern of healthy individuals in a laboratory changed as a function of how many researchers were present during the experiment Observations like these underscore that study volunteers adapt their behavior to the specific laboratory environment and warrant the question of how well we can transfer our lab based understanding of gait patterns and the underlying neuromuscular control system to walking during daily living Another research area where lab based movement assessments have led to conflicting findings is the field of sports injury prevention Many neuromuscular training programs have been shown to be effective in reducing the sport injury rate in athletes by 30 50% or more in a variety of different multi directional sports Nevertheless lab based assessments of the same athletes who completed those training programs were often not able to detect improvements in motor control of sport specific movements or a reduction in joint loading two factors thought to be closely linked with sport injury risk This disconnect suggests that lab based assessments of movement and motor control are often poor indicators of player behavior during real game scenarios and may limit our ability to screen athletes for injury risk or monitor their progress in rehabilitation These examples highlight that we should strive for the assessment and investigation of human movement and motor control in natural environments i e where individuals patients athletes or other groups of interest perform explore and interact under real world conditions
