Lee Hamilton,Joseph Sanders,1992-01-01 It is a fundamental human impulse to seek restitution or retribution when a wrong is done yet individuals and societies assess responsibility and allocate punishment for wrongdoing in different ways This book investigates how average citizens in the United States and Japan think about and judge various kinds of wrongdoing how they determine who is responsible when things go wrong and how they prefer to punish offenders Drawing on the results of surveys they conducted in Detroit Michigan and Yokohama and Kanazawa Japan the authors compare both individual and cultural reactions to wrongdoing They find that decisions about justice are influenced by whether or not there seems to be a social relationship between the offender and victim the American tendency is to see actors in isolation while the Japanese tendency is to see them in relation to others The Japanese who emphasize the importance of role obligations and social ties mete out punishment with the goal of restoring the offender to the social network Americans who acknowledge fewer ties that bind and have firmer convictions that evil resides in individuals punish wrongdoers by isolating them from the community The authors explore the implications of justice among friends versus justice towards strangers as approaches to the righting of wrongs in modern society Their findings will be of interest to students of social psychology the sociology of law and Japanese studies      The ABC's of Languages and
