The Monastic Landscape of Late Antique Egypt Darlene L. Brooks Hedstrom, 2017-11-27 Darlene L Brooks Hedstrom offers a new history of the field of Egyptian monastic archaeology It is the first study in English to trace how scholars identified a space or site as monastic within the Egyptian landscape and how such identifications impacted perceptions of monasticism Brooks Hedstrom then provides an ecohistory of Egypt's tripartite landscape to offer a reorientation of the perception of the physical landscape She analyzes late antique documentary evidence early monastic literature and ecclesiastical history before turning to the extensive archaeological evidence of Christian monastic settlements In doing so she illustrates the stark differences between idealized monastic landscape and the actual monastic landscape that was urbanized through monastic constructions Drawing upon critical theories in landscape studies materiality and phenomenology Brooks Hedstrom looks at domestic settlements of non monastic and monastic settlements to posit what features makes monastic settlements unique thus offering a new history of monasticism in Egypt Elenchus of Biblica, 2000 Monographic Series Library of Congress, Tombs for the Living Elisabeth R. O'Connell, 2007 The characterization of Egyptian monasticism as a desert movement arises primarily from the success of certain fourth century literary texts circulated outside of Egypt Yet recent historical research has demonstrated a whole range of choices for ascetic dwelling in late antique Egypt where men and women might practice their discipline in households in cities and towns in abandoned villages in the outer or inner desert Archaeological including papyrological epigraphical and representational sources evidence another widely practiced option which has been surprisingly under recognized by historians of early Christianity the reuse of monumental funerary architecture for habitation In this context it is crucial to recognize that both Greek oros and Coptic toou can mean not only mountain and desert but also cemetery and monastery Thus textual sources can easily mislead historians unaware of the archaeological context of a given desert monastery Using a combination of archaeological sources together with literary texts transmitted through the manuscript tradition I explore the practical and ideological motivations for monastic occupation of monumental funerary architecture in one geographically circumscribed region Western Thebes As the necropolis of ancient Egypt's great southern capital Western Thebes provides an unparalleled corpus of archaeological material evidencing the establishment of churches saints shrines monasteries and hermitages in adapted pharaonic tombs and mortuary temples The contents of excavated Greek and Coptic documentary e.g legal texts letters magical medical texts and literary papyri e.g saints Lives allow multiple points of access to both the physical description and conceptual construction of the ancient Necropolis in Late Antiquity Texts transmitted through the manuscript tradition record the Lives of saints said to have occupied the region and vividly depict ancient tombs and their mummified inhabitants My analysis demonstrates that perceptions might not always be fixed In texts the representation of the ancient

Necropolis and its ascetic occupants might differ depending on subject audience occasion and circumstance Nevertheless even in the most everyday texts authors recognized the Necropolis as a place apart from the mundane world and I argue reusing the funerary monuments of the past conferred authority and status upon its Christian residents Byzantium and Islam Metropolitan Museum of Art (New York, N.Y.),2012 This magnificent volume explores the epochal transformations and unexpected continuities in the Byzantine Empire from the 7th to the 9th century At the beginning of the 7th century the Empire s southern provinces the vibrant diverse areas of North Africa and the eastern Mediterranean were at the crossroads of exchanges reaching from Spain to China These regions experienced historic upheavals when their Christian and Jewish communities encountered the emerging Islamic world and by the 9th century an unprecedented cross fertilization of cultures had taken place This extraordinary age is brought vividly to life in insightful contributions by leading international scholars accompanied by sumptuous illustrations of the period s most notable arts and artifacts Resplendent images of authority religion and trade embodied in precious metals brilliant textiles fine ivories elaborate mosaics manuscripts and icons many of them never before published highlight the dynamic dialogue between the rich array of Byzantine styles and the newly forming Islamic aesthetic With its masterful exploration of two centuries that would shape the emerging medieval world this illuminating publication provides a unique interpretation of a period that still resonates today Catalog of the Melville J.
