

Do not weep, maiden, for war is kind.
Because your lover threw wild hands toward the sky
And the affrighted steed ran on alone,
Do not weep.
War is kind.

*Hoarse, booming drums of the regiment,
Little souls who thirst for fight,
These men were born to drill and die.
The unexplained glory flies above them,
Great is the battle-god, great, and his kingdom --
A field where a thousand corpses lie.*

Do not weep, babe, for war is kind.
Because your father tumbled in the yellow trenches,
Raged at his breast, gulped and died,
Do not weep.
War is kind.

*Swift blazing flag of the regiment,
Eagle with crest of red and gold,
These men were born to drill and die.
Point for them the virtue of slaughter,
Make plain to them the excellence of killing
And a field where a thousand corpses lie.*

Mother whose heart hung humble as a button
On the bright splendid shroud of your son,
Do not weep.
War is kind.

War Is Kind Stephen Crane,2021-05-03 The first stanza opens with the speaker beseeching a maiden not to weep for war is kind This opening sentence sets the bitter ironic tone of the poem as the reader already knows that the brutality of war is the very antithesis of kindness The speaker says that though the maiden s lover was knocked down while his frightened horse ran on alone she should not weep The dramatic and chaotic image of a young man throwing wild hands toward the sky as he is killed sharply contrasts with the speaker s dispassionate final line War is kind In contrast with the intimate setting of the first stanza the second stanza describes a battlefield setting as if from afar One can hear the booming sound of the regiment s drums The speaker describes the young soldiers as little souls who are born to drill and die This line portrays the soldiers not as powerful men in control of their own destinies but as pitiful figures who are powerless to change their fate An unexplained glory flies high above the soldiers This glory could refer to the flag or simply the abstract notions of valor and bravery that are associated with war Either way the fact that the glory is unexplained illustrates the futility of what the men on the battlefield are doing there is no true purpose or real justification behind their battle It should also be noted that the glory whether it is a flag or simply the concept of glory is not down on the battlefield with the men It flies high above them demonstrating how far removed the lofty ideals of war are from the physical horrors of battle The stanza ends with an allusion to a great battle god who looks out over his kingdom which we would reasonably expect to be full of warriors Instead his kingdom merely consists of the dead a field where a thousand corpses lie

War Is Kind (Illustrated), Last Words and Wounds in the Rain Stephen Crane,2020-11-10 Stephen Crane was an American poet novelist and short story writer Prolific throughout his short life he wrote notable works in the Realist tradition as well as early examples of American Naturalism and Impressionism He is recognized by modern critics as one of the most innovative writers of his generation
