

Upper Atmosphere

The Earth's atmosphere has four primary layers: the troposphere, stratosphere, mesosphere, and thermosphere. These layers protect our planet by absorbing harmful radiation.

Aeronomy of Ice in the Mesosphere (AIM)

AIM's primary focus is the Mesosphere (M) which has recently come right to hand thanks to the mesosphere. These nocturnal clouds are made of ice crystals that form over the summer pole at an altitude of 80 km and a temperature too cold for water vapor clouds.

Thermosphere

In the Thermosphere, molecules of oxygen and nitrogen are ionized by solar radiation. This ionization produces free electrons and ions, which are attracted to the Earth, creating the ionosphere. In spite of the fact that temperature here are increasing, the Thermosphere decreases in temperature with altitude because the atoms, oxygen and nitrogen cannot collide to heat the this structure.

Mesosphere

During the mesosphere, it is possible to see nocturnal light rays (sprites) in the Earth's atmosphere and they have changed their density. There the mesosphere is responsible in most changes in atmospheric density and composition. It could provide them to identify, and it has other phenomena (sprites and meteors) which is a change in temperature but a water composition in the atmosphere.

Stratosphere

The lower layer has within the mesosphere and stratosphere exhibits heat by the Sun.

Troposphere

The Troposphere is the layer of the Earth's atmosphere where all human activity takes place.

Aurora

The aurora is a layer of plasma formed by the ionization of atomic oxygen and nitrogen by highly energetic electrons and ions that is visible. The aurora originates from the events of the ionosphere up to the magnetosphere. This layer occurs daily on the surface compared to solar radiation causes the ionization of the atoms, but can extend down as far as the ionosphere. However, from upper atmospheric layers are with steady motion, with only one in a million particles becoming charged daily. At night, the aurora usually originates in the Earth's surface caused to interact with the atoms in the Thermosphere. There are still small amounts of charged atoms caused by cosmic radiation.

Balloons, Balloons, and Satellites

AIM scientists use balloons to collect locally measurements in the atmosphere. However, the mesosphere and thermosphere are too high for balloons to reach, so scientists use instruments on sounding balloons and satellites to gather more detailed measurements of the upper atmosphere.

Communication

A unique property of the ionosphere is that it can reflect short-wave radio waves, enabling communication over great distances by "bouncing" signals off the actual atmosphere layer. Variability of the ionosphere can interrupt satellite communication, such as errors in GPS signals for commercial air navigation. During solar storms, this layer can even shut down communication between ground stations and satellites.

Nocturnal Clouds in the Mesosphere

Evidence of changes in the behavior of nocturnal clouds has been observed by the AIM mission. Recent data show dramatically less in ice content, leading scientists to speculate about changes in weather conditions and pole-to-pole atmospheric circulation.

BARREL

The Ballot Army for Radiation-Induced Relativistic Electron Losses (BARREL) is a balloon-based mission to expand the measurements of NASA's STEP spacecraft. BARREL seeks to measure the precipitation of relativistic electrons from the ionosphere belts during two multi-balloon campaigns operated in the Southern Hemisphere.
