Strategic Learning And Its Limits:

Strategic Learning and its Limits H. Peyton Young, 2004-11-04 In this concise book based on his Arne Ryde Lectures in 2002 Young suggests a conceptual framework for studying strategic learning and highlights theoretical developments in the area He discusses the interactive learning problem reinforcement and regret equilibrium conditional no regret learning prediction postdiction and calibration fictitious play and its variants Bayesian learning and hypothesis testing Young's framework emphasizes the amount of information required to implement different types of learning rules criteria for evaluating their performance and alternative notions of equilibrium to which they converge He also stresses the limits of what can be achieved for a given type of game and a given amount of information there may exist no learning procedure that satisfies certain reasonable criteria of performance and convergence In short Young has provided a valuable primer that delineates what we know what we would like to know and the limits of what we can know when we try to learn about a system that is composed of other learners

Learning and Strategic Product Innovation Harald Gruber, 1994 Hardbound The aim of this book is to highlight a number of separate issues in the analysis of product innovation and the implications for firm behaviour This is done by taking a close look at the semiconductor industry where product innovation is undertaken frequently and the innovation cycles unfold in very short periods of time There are three main themes the first theme concerns the evolution of market share patterns the time profile of which has shown a striking regularity and persistence over successive generations of products A game theoretic model generates equilibrium results consistent with the basic facts observed The second theme is about the relevance of the learning by doing concept in the production of semiconductors estimating the learning curve The third theme addresses the relevance of trade policy in innovative industries It is argued that protectionist trade policies have powerful implications for leadership product innovati
