NASA's Constellation program comprises a set of launch boosters, space vehicles and support modules that together will place humans on the moon by 2020. Plans call for astronauts to stay on the lunar surface for periods ranging from four days to more than six months.

6 The crew transfers to the lander and descends to the surface, leaving the empty Orion circling the moon. The astronauts explore the surface.

5 When Orion reaches the moon four days later, the lander's engine brakes the spacecraft, which enters lunar orbit.

4 Propelled by the Earth departure stage, the spacecraft heads toward the moon. After the rocket burn, the crew jettisons the Earth departure stage.

7 The moon lander's ascent stage returns the crew to orbit, where it docks with Orion. The astronauts transfer back into the crew module and dump the ascent stage.

8 The service module's engine propels Orion back to Earth.

9 Four days later the astronauts jettison the service module. The crew module, protected by its heat shield, reenters the atmosphere.

10 Parachutes slow the crew module's descent. Cushioned by inflatable air bags, the spacecraft touches down in the western U.S.

Inflatable air bags

5 Orion rendezvous with the Earth departure stage and lunar lander.

2 Shortly afterward Ares I (the "Stick") blasts off carrying four astronauts and the Orion crew exploration vehicle and service module into a similar, low Earth orbit.

1 An Ares V cargo launch vehicle lifts off with the Earth departure stage and lunar lander. When the booster's fuel runs out, the Earth departure stage sends itself and the lander to an altitude of about 300 kilometers.
