processing begins In this lecture we give an overview of recent research in stream processing ranging from answering simple queries on high speed streams to loading real time data feeds into a streaming warehouse for off line analysis We will discuss two types of systems for end to end stream processing Data Stream Management Systems DSMSs and Streaming Data Warehouses SDWs A traditional database management system typically processes a stream of ad hoc queries over relatively static data In contrast a DSMS evaluates static long running queries on streaming data making a single pass over the data and using limited working memory In the first part of this lecture we will discuss research problems in DSMSs such as continuous query languages non blocking query operators that continually react to new data and continuous query optimization The second part covers SDWs which combine the real time response of a DSMS by loading new data as soon as they arrive with a data warehouse s ability to manage Terabytes of historical data on secondary storage

While traditional databases excel at complex queries over historical data they are inherently pull based and therefore ill equipped to push new information to clients Systems for data stream management and processing on the other hand are natively push oriented and thus facilitate reactive behavior However they do not retain data indefinitely and are therefore not able to answer historical queries The book provides an overview over the different push based mechanisms for data retrieval in each system class and the semantic differences between them It also provides a comprehensive overview over the current state of the art in real time databases It first includes an in depth system survey of today s real time databases Firebase Meteor RethinkDB Parse Baqend and others Second the high level classification scheme illustrated above provides a gentle introduction into the system space of data management Abstracting from the extreme system diversity in this field it helps readers build a mental model of the
