Constructing Interpersonality

Enrique Lafuente-Millán, Rosa Lorés-Sanz, Pilar Mur-Dueñas, 2010-02-19 The view that academic discourse is by definition impersonal has long been superseded. It seems unquestionable now that the interpersonal component of texts—that is, the ways in which the writers project themselves and their audience in the discourse—is an essential factor determining the success of scholarly communication and has become a fundamental issue in the field of English for Academic Purposes (EAP). Interpersonality is the key issue around which the articles in this edited book focus on. The eighteen contributions included in this volume provide a wide exploratory view of the many academic genres in which interpersonal communication is manifested and the various analytical approaches from which the textual manifestation of that interpersonal communication can be studied. The varied origin of the contributors is also representative of the global interest that the issue of interpersonal communication arouses in the field of academic discourse analysis at an international level. The present volume constitutes a highly valuable tool for applied linguists and discourse analysts with an interest in EAP as well as for students, instructors, and language teachers interested in academic discourse. The book may also be of interest to other agents intervening in the research publication process, such as translators, proofreaders, reviewers, and editors.

Life Philip Schuyler Allen, Carlos Castillo, 1920 Research and Advanced Technology for Digital Libraries Traugott Koch, Ingeborg T. Solvberg, 2004-02-26 Welcome to ECDL 2003 and to these conference proceedings featuring all the papers presented at the 7th European Conference on Research and Advanced Technology for Digital Libraries. Following Pisa 1997, Heraklion 1998, Paris 1999, Lisbon 2000, Da stad 2001, and Rome 2002, ECDL 2003 in Trondheim reaches some of the northernmost shores of the continent. Being the seventh in an annual series of conferences, it represents, for better and for worse, a considerable tradition in the fast-changing world of digital library-related research and development. It is still a difficult and slow job to change traditional forms and formats of communication at and related to scientific conferences and also to change participants' expectations. Yet each new conference builds upon the topics and communities involved in previous events and inherits the commitment to quality established by its predecessors. Each year ECDL has to live up to its role of being the major European forum focusing on digital libraries and associated technical, practical, and social issues, bringing diverse disciplines and application communities together. There are still challenges in this respect ahead of us, but the quality and range of papers and other contributions combined with opportunities for debate should ensure that ECDL 2003 sets high standards for the future.
