Spatial Inequality And Development:

Spatial Inequality and Development S. M. Ravi Kanbur, Anthony J. Venables, 2005 This is an introduction to spatial and regional inequality Drawing on data from 25 countries from around the world it examines the questions What exactly is spatial inequality Why does it matter And what should be the policy response to it Provided by publisher Spatial Inequality and Development S. M. Ravi Kanbur, 2005 Spatial Inequality and Development in Asia Ravi Kanbur, Anthony J. Venables, Guanghua Wan, 2005 Special Issue: Spatial Inequality and Development in Asia Ravi Kanbur, Anthony J. Venables, Guanghua Wan, 2005 Spatial Inequality and Development Christian Lessmann, 2011 Introduction to the Special Issue Ravi Kanbur, Anthony J. Venables, Guanghua Wan, 2005 Spatial Inequality and Development Weng Hui Cong Shoe, 1985 Spatial Inequality and Development World Institute for Development Economics Research, 2005

Spatial Inequality and Economic Development Sukkoo Kim, 2008 Spatial inequality is an important feature of many developing countries that seems to increase with economic growth and development At the same time there seems to be little consensus on the causes of spatial inequality and on a list of effective policy instruments that may foster or reduce spatial inequality This paper examines the theoretical and empirical literature on spatial inequality to learn what we know and do not know about the causes of spatial inequality to investigate what policies may or may not ameliorate spatial inequality and to determine whether policy makers can identify and implement policies that promote or reduce spatial inequality

Spatial Inequality and Development in Central Asia Kathryn Anderson, Richard William Thomas Pomfret, United Nations University. World Institute for Development Economics Research, 2004 Exploring Sustainable Development Martin Purvis, Alan Grainger, 2004 Sustainable development is capturing the attention of planners politicians and business leaders Within the academic sphere its study is increasingly breaching disciplinary boundaries to become a focus of attention for natural and social scientists alike But in studying such a key concept it is vital that there is a clear definition of what it means how it is applied on the ground and the influence it exerts upon people s perceptions of change in the physical environment economic activity and society Exploring Sustainable Development is a major new text which provides a multifaceted introduction to key areas of study in this field examining sustainability at the full range of spatial scales from the local to the global Building on existing theory it demonstrates the unique contributions that thinking geographically about space place and human environment relationships can bring to the analysis of sustainable development This book explores different interpretations of sustainable development in both theory and practice in developed and developing countries and in rural and urban areas It pays particular attention to the local national and international politics of implementation the future of climate and energy the role of business and different conceptions of agricultural sustainability This wide ranging text is ideal for undergraduates and postgraduates in geography environmental science development studies and related social and political sciences Equality and Sustainable Human Development - Issues and Policy Implications Dr.K

Sivachithappa,2014-05-17 Equality and Sustainable Human Development is the need of our under Globalisation This volume is useful to Social Sciences Commerce and General Readers in Particular Spatial Disparities in Human Development S. M. Ravi Kanbur,Anthony Venables,Guang Hua Wan,2006 Focuses on issues of poverty and inequality that are directly related to the Millennium Development Goals This book addresses a range of issues including interlinkages between conflict and inequality poverty mapping and the causes and consequences of inequality Geography, Capacity, and Inequality Pablo Beramendi,Melissa Rogers,2022-06-09 In this Element we investigate how economic geography the distribution of subnational economic endowments within a nation shapes long run patterns of inequality through its impact on the development of fiscal capacity We present an argument that links economic geography to capacity through different types of industrialization processes We show how early industrializers shape spatial distributions domestically by investing in productivity across their nations and externally by reinforcing spatial polarization among late industrializers We also show how differences in economic geography impact the process of capacity building setting the stage for the modern politics of redistribution discussed in Volume II We support this argument with descriptive data case studies and cross national analyses Learning cities in a knowledge based society ,2010 World Development Report 2009 World Bank,2008-11-04 Rising densities of human settlements migration and transport to reduce distances to market and specialization and trade facilitated by fewer international divisions are central to economic development The transformations along these three dimensions density distance and division are most noticeable in North America Western Europe and Japan but countries in Asia and Eastern Europe are changing in ways similar in scope and speed World Development Report 2009 Reshaping Economic Geography concludes that these spatial transformations are essential and should be encouraged The conclusion is not without controversy Slum dwellers now number a billion but the rush to cities continues Globalization is believed to benefit many but not the billion people living in lagging areas of developing nations High poverty and mortality persist among the world s bottom billion while others grow wealthier and live longer lives Concern for these three billion often comes with the prescription that growth must be made spatially balanced The WDR has a different message economic growth is seldom balanced and efforts to spread it out prematurely will jeopardize progress The Report documents how production becomes more concentrated spatially as economies grow proposes economic integration as the principle for promoting successful spatial transformations and revisits the debates on urbanization territorial development and regional integration and shows how today s developers can reshape economic geography Regional Development Dialogue ,2008 An international journal focusing on third world development problems Rethinking Spatial Inequalities in Development Abdul-Gafaru Abdulai,2016 This paper offers a political explanation to the problem of spatial inequality in developing countries paying particular attention to the implications of patronage politics and inter elite power relations for the spatial distribution of public goods After showing that existing explanations of spatial inequality are at best partial the paper argues that prospects for overcoming spatial inequalities in the clientelist driven political environments of developing countries depend substantially on the ways in which elites from lagging regions are incorporated into ruling coalitions and how such forms of incorporation shape their influence over resource allocation decisions and policy agenda more broadly The paper also departs from much of the existing literature on spatial inequality by emphasizing the need to understand powerlessness on the part of lagging regions as stemming not necessarily from their political exclusion from political decision making structures but also from their incorporation into such structures on terms that potentially underpin their poverty Based on this argument the paper proposes a new framework for exploring the deeper and more structural underpinnings of spatial inequality in developing countries

Spatial inequalities and regional development Henk Folmer, Jan Oosterhaven, 1979-06-30 In September 1977 a Regional Science Symposium was held at the Faculty of Economics of the University of Groningen in the Netherlands Organized because of the recent establishment at the Faculty of Economics of a group that is engaged in teaching and research in the field of regional science the aim of the symposium was to make university members more familiar with regional science and to introduce the newly created group to the national and international scene Two separate topics were selected of potential interest to both researchers and policy makers The first spatial inequalities and regional development was chosen because of its central place in regional science Authors from several disciplines were asked to approach this theme from a general policy orientated point of view This ensured the enlightenment of the various dimensions of spatial inequality and its implications for regional policy The results have been collected in the volume Spatial Inequalities and Regional Development The second theme focused on spatial statistical analysis This branch of statistics is a relatively new one which receives growing attention among researchers in the field of applied regional science The meeting on this topic concentrated on new results of research on the use of appropriate statistical and econometric methods for analyzing spatial data The papers concerned have been collected into another volume Exploratory and Explanatory Statistical Analysis of Spatial Data

Economic Development and Inequality in China Hong Yu, 2011 The conventional belief that all regions have equally benefited from China's remarkable development over the last three decades is subjected to criticism in this book as Hong Yu systematically analyses the issue of regional inequality during the post 1978 period using the case of Guangdong Guangdong is one of the key industrial centres and economic powerhouses in China and as a pioneer province instigating economic reform as China opened up to the world it offers an ideal focus upon which to question and enrich the Western theories of economic geography and regional disparity Based on field research analysis of geographic characteristics and regression models this book illustrates how Guangdong's impressive development record has been marred by its rising regional disparity investigates the main causes of this disparity and draws conclusions regarding the lessons China can learn from it Economic Development and Inequality in China will be of interest to students and scholars of Chinese economics Chinese regional studies economic geography and

China Studies Hong Yu is a Visiting Research Fellow at the National University of Singapore His research interests lie in the field of regional economy He is the author of a chapter on Chinaa TM s two delta regions in the book China and The Global Economic Crisis
