Computers and the Teaching of Writing in American Higher Education, 1979-1994 Gail E. Hawisher, 1996 This book is a history composed of histories Its particular focus is the way in which computers entered and changed the field of composition studies a field that defines itself both as a research community and as a community of teachers This may have a somewhat sinister suggestion that technology alone has agency but this history made of histories is not principally about computers It is about people the teachers and scholars who have adapted the computer to their personal and professional purposes From the authors perspectives change in technology drives changes in the ways we live and work and we agents to a degree in control of our own lives use technology to achieve our human purposes REVIEW This book reminds those of us now using computers to teach writing where we have been and it brings those who are just entering the field up to date More important it will inform administrators curriculum specialists and others responsible for implementing the future uses of technology in writing instruction Computers and Composition

Resources in Education ,1984 Computer-Mediated Communication Susan C. Herring,1996-06-26 Text based interaction among humans connected via computer networks such as takes place via email and in synchronous modes such as chat MUDs and MOOs has attracted considerable popular and scholarly attention This collection of 14 articles on text based computer mediated communication CMC is the first to bring empirical evidence from a variety of disciplinary perspectives to bear on questions raised by the new medium The first section linguistic perspectives addresses the question of how CMC compares with speaking and writing and describes its unique structural characteristics Section two on social and ethical perspectives explores conflicts between the interests of groups and those of individual users including issues of online sex and sexism In the third section cross cultural perspectives the advantages and risks of using CMC to communicate across cultures are examined in three studies involving users in East Asia Mexico and students of ethnically diverse backgrounds in remedial writing classes in the United States The final section deals with the effects of CMC on group interaction in a women s studies mailing list a hierarchically organized workplace and a public protest on the Internet against corporate interests
