DANIEL G. SAUNDERS

THE ASSESSMENT of domestic abuse presents many challenges to the practitioner. Abuse takes a wide variety of forms and both the victim and offender are often reluctant to share information. Offenders typically try to minimize the extent of abuse out of shame and fear of punishment. Victims, who are sometimes blamed for their victimization, also may feel shame. They may be reluctant to talk about the abuse because they fear retaliation, have a sense of loyalty to the abuser, or want to avoid painful memories.

Assessment in this area is challenging for other reasons as well. There are complex legal issues with which the practitioner must be familiar, such as providing information for child custody decisions or determining when signs of dangerousness require warning a potential victim. Most assessment tools in the family violence field are not well developed. Some commonly used measures of family violence have been criticized for their inadequacies.

This chapter describes multiple methods for assessing the presence of domestic violence as well as its risk factors and aftereffects. The application of these assessment methods to legal cases is described, followed by a case example to illustrate the evaluation of an actual court case. The chapter focuses primarily on physical abuse.

DESCRIPTION OF THE PROBLEM

The view of the family as "a haven in a heartless world" has been tempered in recent years by the knowledge that all too often it is a place of great cruelty. Domestic violence affects over two million marriages in the United States every year and a comparably high rate of dating and cohabiting couples (Levy, 1991; Plichta, 1996; Straus & Gelles, 1990). Violence frequently continues after separation (Tjaden & Thoennes, 1998). The violence can range from a few slaps to threats with lethal weapons. Its frequency can range from a single occurrence to weekly. Even minor violence must be the focus of concern because it sometimes escalates to severe violence, and in itself can change the power dynamics of the relationship.

Battering Of Women Larry Tiftt,1993-08-04 Why have most interventions failed to decrease domestic violence in this country Larry Tiftt provides reasons and suggests possible solutions in this revealing study of the cultural social structural and interpersonal dynamics that support a man's choice to batter his intimate partner Tiftt addresses the cultural underpinnings of violence against women including the gender hierarchy evident in the basic structure of our society and in our institutions Through an analysis of the stages in the battering process he explores the context meanings and decision making processes that lead men to batter women and encourage women to choose various coping resistance and survival strategies What emerges from Tiftt's study are not only patterns of physical violence but also patterns of sexual psychological and spiritual violence that the batterer uses to control his partner's thoughts to annihilate her voice and to deconstruct her sense of self and reality

Intrapersonal and interpersonal interventions have failed to decrease the prevalence of battering in our society Primary prevention strategies designed to change the social structural arrangements that foster violence are likely to be much more effective Tifft explains why and how these community coordinated interventions which challenge our most basic assumptions are our best hope for reducing the incidence of battering Woman Battering Michael Steinman,1991 Battered Women ,1996 California.
