Stroke Theory Of Writing:

The Stroke. Theory of Writing Gerrit Noordzij, 2019 The stroke is the most concise and powerful statement of Gerrit Noordzij's theory of writing and was first published in Dutch in 1985. The book puts forward a genuine theory of all writing done with any kind of generating tool. Noordzij starts with fundamentals: the space within and between letters and proceeds in stages towards a full account of how the strokes of writing can be formed and an analysis of the qualities of letters. Along the way there are reflections on history and culture and remarks on method. Noordzij's theory serves to repair the split that grew up with the invention of printing between written and typographic letters. He shows us the underlying written quality of all letters with whatever technology they have been formed. Just by virtue of its strong theory, The Stroke has practical consequences that transcend any simple 'how to do it' approach. Gerrit Noordzij is one of the eminent Dutch graphic designers and in all senses a writer. He has also been a path-breaking teacher at the Royal Academy of Art in The Hague where from 1970 to 1990 he directed the course in letter design. Among the students from his classes are some of the most distinguished Dutch type and graphic designers. As a writer of essays and books, his works include the bulletin Letterletter reissued in book form in 2000 and De handen van de zeven zusters 2000.

Theory and Practice. How hand-writing may be taught and learned thoroughly Joseph CLARKE (late of King Edward's Grammar School, Norwich.), 1861

A Computational Theory of Writing Systems Richard William Sproat, 2000-07-03 This book develops a formal computational theory of writing systems. It offers specific proposals about the linguistic objects that are represented by orthographic elements: what levels of linguistic representation are involved and how they may differ across writing systems and what formal constraints hold of the mapping relation between linguistic and orthographic elements. Based on the insights gained, Sproat then proposes a taxonomy of writing systems. The treatment of theoretical linguistic issues and their computational implementation is complemented with discussion of empirical psycholinguistic work on reading and its relevance for the computational model developed here. Throughout the model is illustrated with a number of detailed case studies of writing systems around the world. This book will be of interest to students and researchers in a variety of fields including theoretical and computational linguistics, the psycholinguistics of reading and writing, and speech technology.

Transforming Hanzi Pedagogy in the Digital Age: Theory, Research, and Practice Chengzhi Chu, Matthew D. Coss, Phyllis N. Zhang, 2024-08-15

Transforming Hanzi Pedagogy in the Digital Age brings together expert researchers and practitioners to offer a coherent theoretical, empirical, pedagogical, and experiential justification for a shift in pedagogical focus from handwriting to e-writing in L2 Chinese pedagogy. This volume argues for a pedagogy based on the 21st-century communicative needs of L2 Chinese users, grounded in empirical research as well as practical and lived experiences. The authors propose an e-writing as primary framework for L2 Chinese instruction in the 21st century, a transformational proposal which will fundamentally shift the pedagogical focus of L2 Chinese instruction globally towards more learner centered research informed practice This volume includes three theoretical foundation chapters four empirical studies three descriptions of program level implementation and ten expert L2 Chinese user vignettes which taken together offer a thorough introduction to e writing for the future of L2 Chinese teaching and learning This book will be informative for Chinese language instructors researchers program directors materials developers and advanced graduate students in both CFL and CSL contexts worldwide
