

The Push and Pull Factors that Lead Countries Away or Towards China

Pull factors:

- China's manufacturing and mining sector is by far the world's largest with 213m workers in 2019
- Chinese workers are one of the most cost effective thanks to their discipline and education
- It has one of the best infrastructure systems, including internet and telecommunications
- China boasts the most comprehensive low-to-middle-end manufacturing sectors
- China's ruling party has maintained social stability, essential for the safety of supply chains
- China's strong social control enabled draconian measures to contain COVID-19 and ensured a fast recovery of its manufacturing sector

Push factors:

- China's rapid growth has led to rising wage costs and increasing environmental concerns
- A more confident China has retracted special tax concessions for foreign investors
- The rapid escalation of the US-China trade conflict is likely to continue past the US election
- The existing tariff hikes and export bans could force more production to leave China
- Multinationals may be less willing to invest in China from an ESG and other prospective
