Strategic Mobility:

Army Logistician, 1996      Strategic Mobility and the Transforming Army, 2002 The purpose of this monograph is to answer the research question Will the current and programmed Department of Defense Transportation System DTS support the strategic responsiveness requirements of the U S Army during the initial phase of transformation The answer to this question is significant because the U S Army is undergoing a transformation to become more strategically responsive A measure of Army responsiveness is dependent on its ability to rapidly deploy The Army will only deploy as quickly as the DTS is capable of moving its units and equipment      Army Sustainment, 2010 The Department of the Army's official professional bulletin on sustainment publishing timely authoritative information on Army and Defense sustainment plans programs policies operations procedures and doctrine for the benefit of all sustainment personnel      How the Army Runs: A Senior Leader Reference Handbook, 2011-2012 U.S. Army War College, 2013-05-20 The U S Army War College USAWC is proud to present the 28th Edition of How the Army Runs A Senior Leader Reference Handbook 2011 2012 Publication of this text at this time when the Army has been at war for almost a decade has almost completed restructuring of its operating force and is addressing the structure of the generating force as well as completing formidable base closure and restationing actions gives credence to the enduring truth that in order to be successful the Army must sustain and improve itself while it is fully committed to the Nation's bidding The systems and processes documented and explained in this work are designed to do just that This text was prepared under the direction of the faculty of the Department of Command Leadership and Management It is intended to be used in an academic environment during the study of the systems and processes used to develop and sustain trained and ready combat forces to be used by the Combatant Commanders      The Half War Robert P Haffa Jr, 2019-07-11 This book offers a strategic organizational and logistical analysis in a historical context of the planning of conventional forces to meet a limited contingency The central question is Why from 1960 to 1982 did the U S fail to construct a coherent limited contingency force Analysis of a series of comparative case studies reveals that the strategic concept to the half war or limited contingency was never articulated adequately enough to support specific force planning Organizations designed to oversee and command limited contingency forces fragmented by interservice rivalries and the absence of joint doctrine lacked multiservice composition and a unified command structure A search for economy in limited contingency forces seemed justified by illusions about their capabilities Low budgetary priority and Congressional perceptions that enhanced U S rapid deployment capabilities would encourage U S global intervention contributed to the lack of logistical and mobility systems dedicated to them The wider intent of this study is to shed light on the general purpose force planning process and to suggest policy guidance as the United States once again embarks on a major conventional force planning initiative Rather than being trapped by the past new efforts to meet vital U S military interests below the nuclear threshold must identify half war planning contingencies structure unified commands capable of directing tailored conventional forces in specific theaters and provide adequate strategic mobility systems      Strategic Mobility Mark F. Johnston, Army War College (U.S.), 1996      The U.S. Strategic Mobility Posture James F. Willie, Army War College (U.S.), 1992 There have been numerous studies of strategic mobility from the 1981 Congressionally Mandated Mobility Study CMMS to those of the subjects of sealift airlift with the case for the C 17 the precipitous decline of the merchant marine and the capability of the Ready Reserve Force RRF More recent studies have addressed future requirements for strategic mobility in the wake of changes in the former Soviet Union and Europe a reduced forward presence and successes in the Gulf War The consensus on strategic mobility is that it continues to be a cornerstone to success This study addresses strategic mobility operations however it does not dwell on past issues that are crucial to strategic mobility but have become axiomatic to the overall mobility debate It assesses strategic mobility capability in light of events that affect mobility planning of the future The first is the 1992 Mobility Requirements Study future mobility requirements are not demand driven but based on scenarios and acceptable risks The next is national security strategy and its focus on regional contingencies and CONUS based forces Finally it addresses the 1993 budget which earmarks 3 billion for sealift to build buy or modify cargo vessels      Global Strategic Mobility Dean A. Nelson, Army War College (U.S.), 2003 Operation Desert Shield Desert Storm served as a wake up call to the Department of Defense in regards to its mobility posture and capabilities After more than a decade to evaluate and respond to the lessons learned has the Department of Defense improved its mobility capabilities Successive Mobility Requirements Studies since 1991 have set forth what mobility capabilities the combatant commander foresees This paper reviews the progress of mobility capabilities from Desert Storm to the present It will review and evaluate the legs of the mobility triad airlift sealift and prepositioning for actions taken to improve each portion This evaluation will provide the basis for the overall assessment of the global mobility capabilities the Department of Defense currently has      Strategic Mobility Roger D. Baskett, Army War College (U.S.), 1991 Strategic mobility is a phrase often used in today's military jargon In fact strategic mobility is an integral part of the military strategy supporting the national security interests of the United States When most military personnel think of strategic mobility they usually define the concept in terms of air lift and sealift capability The Secretary of Defense in his 1990 Joint Military Net Assessment to the U S Congress refers to strategic mobility as a strategic lift triad of airlift sealift and prepositioning Certainly these three aspects of strategic mobility are crucial to a viable force projection capability This paper focuses on what I believe are the two key concepts that most accurately describe strategic mobility readiness and sustainability Two cases studies are developed to serve as points of reference in explaining how readiness and sustainability combine to form strategic mobility The first case study describes how the United Kingdom projected a military force to the South Atlantic in response to the Falkland Islands crisis in 1982 The second case study depicts the United States military deployment to Saudi Arabia following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait in August 1990 Following the case studies an analysis of strategic mobility is presented      The Fundamentals of Military Strategy Oliver

Prescott Robinson,1928 The Army Strategic Mobility Program and Land Based Prepositioning Alternatives Philip E Brou (Jr),NAVAL WAR COLL NEWPORT RI DEPT OF OPERATIONS.,1992 In the wake of the collapse of the Soviet Union and Warsaw Pact Threat and based on recent experience in Operations Desert Storm and Desert Shield the U S Army is developing a strategic mobility plan ASMP to provide a comprehensive program for deploying its forces from the Continental U S to military contingencies worldwide The ASMP proposes a program to deploy a tailorable Corps of up to five divisions the lead brigade must be on the ground in 4 days and the lead division in 12 days Two divisions mechanized armored or air assault from CONUS must be deployed in 30 days and the entire Corps with its Support Command in 75 days To support this requirement the ASMP promotes shipbuilding and procurement programs airlift construction particularly the C 17 afloat prepositioning of a heavy brigade and theater support equipment and supplies containerization and documentation automation initiatives Ready Reserve Fleet improvements and a number of improvements in ports transportation infrastructure and reserve component structure But the ASMP fails to address the potentials of land based prepositioning Prepositioning of divisional equipment at SPOEs preplanned and predocumented for seaborne deployment and reconfiguring European POMCUS for deployment rather than local employment would expedite the deployment of forces by eliminating the fort to port phase of movement and provide a flexible responsive strategic asset for worldwide deployment and sustainment of future forces Adding such an initiative to the ASMP would make the program comprehensive and enable it more easily to meet the ambitious timelines envisioned in the program ASMP Deployment Mobility Mobilization Prepositioning FOMCUS Sealift Strategic Mobility Lift Transportation Information System Science and Technology Congress on Information System Science and Technology,1967 The Strategic Mobility Shortfall Ann K.
