DOUBLEDAY

On the main deck, all of the galley deck, Harry Eger, W. G. Harris, and others had been arguing about the best way to get to the beach. It was obvious to them that they weren't a life-and-death struggle...
The oil slick on the water in the cove had a queerening about it, and Harris appeared set on something when I can work through the oil to the sea," he said.
"Don't do it," Eger said.
"Can do it," W. G. insisted.
"The water is too cold and rough, you'll never make it."

W. G. was confident. "Once I can,"
"Look at it," Eger roared. "Look at the waves breaking on the cliffs. You'll never make it."
Harris would not listen. He had made up his mind and before anyone could stop him, he jumped over the side.
Eger was stunned. He watched the water, but saw no sign of his friend. A few minutes followed. W. G. and Harris began toward the beach, but a wave took them toward the oil slick, where they disappeared from view. Then, before his horrified eyes, they were lifted on the crest of a great wave and capped by the spray and blowing up they went, nearly to the top. Then the rock crumpled back with a crash, blowing him suddenly at the same height. Eger had depression had been dashed to the sea. Harris and Eger had very strongly, as if a part of the world was before it.
