Farm and Nonfarm Wage Income of the Hired Farm Working Force ,1946      Women, Work, and Wages National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Occupational Classification and Analysis, 1981-02-01 In order to determine whether methods of job analysis and classification currently used are biased by traditional sex stereotypes or other factors a committee assessed formal systems of job evaluation and other methods currently employed in the private and public sectors for establishing the comparability of jobs and their levels of compensation A review of sociological and economic literature shows that some differences in the characteristics of workers and in jobs do form a legitimate basis for wage differentials Nevertheless there exists a pervasiveness of occupational and job segregation by sex Given the current operation of the labor market and the existence of a variety of factors that permit the persistence of earning differentials between men and women e g labor market segmentation job segregation and employment practices it would seem that intentional and unintentional discriminatory elements enter into the determination of wages and are not likely to disappear Use of a job evaluation system is one possible remedy to this situation While the subjectivity of job evaluation makes job evaluations less than perfect vehicles for resolving pay disputes they can serve to identify potential wage discrimination MN      Women, Work and Wages ,2000      The Hired Farm Working Force of 1957 Sheridan Tracy Maitland, Dorothy Anne Fisher, 1959 The hired farm working force in 1957 totaled nearly 4 million workers and was the largest since 1950 However most of the increase over 1956 was among the very short term seasonal workers those with fewer than 25 days of farm wage work during the year

Pryor, David L. Schaffer, 1999-01-13 This book presents a view of the operations of the labor market totally different from the conventional wisdom The authors present data showing on one hand that jobs requiring a high level of education are increasing more slowly than those requiring somewhat fewer educational credentials On the other hand these jobs requiring less education are increasing faster than those requiring still less formal education Additionally Professors Pryor and Schaffer show how women are replacing men in jobs requiring higher levels of education Using these insights the authors also explain why wages have become more unequal why wages in those jobs requiring extra high cognitive skills have risen and why all other wages have stagnated or fallen in the past quarter century      Working Conditions, Wages and Profits C.
