Understanding Superfund A Progress Report:

Understanding Superfund Jan Paul Acton, 1989 The Superfund program established by Congress in 1980 and reauthorized in 1986 is intended to handle emergencies arising from the release of hazardous wastes to provide long term cleanup for a limited number of sites and to encourage more responsible disposal of hazardous wastes in the future This report provides an overview of the Superfund program its legal basis and its sources of funds presents a concise description of incentives and the major administrative steps taken in their application provides an overview of the major indicators of program effect based on public data available from the Environmental Protection Agency and other selected sources presents a short interpretation of some of the most interesting or puzzling findings and outlines statistics and attempts to capture costs and activities for each of the major groups participating in the Superfund process It also considers the transaction cost issue focusing on two of the key players in the cleanup process very large companies potentially responsible parties and insurers that are brought into the hazardous waste cleanup process by their policy holders indemnity claims It describes their experiences with Superfund and Superfund type sites and shows the division of their expenses between cleanup and transaction costs

Lead Babies and Poisoned Housing Carolyn R. Boiarsky, 2024-09-01 Drawing on historic sources as well as present day interviews Lead Babies and Poisoned Housing is a story about systemic racism environmental injustice and the failure of government In 2016 1 100 mainly minority residents of a low income housing complex in East Chicago Indiana received a letter from the city forcibly evicting them from their homes because a high level of lead was found in the soil under their houses The residents were given two months to move Many could not find safe housing nearby The site was designated by the Environmental Protection Agency as a Superfund site because of the large amount of toxic material on it More than 1 300 similar sites are located throughout the United States Over 70 million people live within three miles of one of these sites Five years later the U S Department of Housing and Urban Development Office of Inspector General charged three federal agencies EPA HUD and CDC with causing the lead poisoning of children living in the complex The EPA responsible for the cleanup had been aware of the situation for 35 years The director of the local housing authority admitted to building the complex over a demolished lead smelter When health issues arose the housing authority blamed the residents sanitary habits rather than its own failure to maintain the structures The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention s testing of blood lead levels was revealed to be faulty In short the very agencies that were supposed to protect these people instead neglected ignored and blamed them But this isn t just a story of victimization it is also about empowerment and community members insisting their voices be heard Lead Babies and Poisoned Housing records the human side of what happens when the industries responsible for polluting leave but the residents remain Those residents tell their stories in their own words not just what happened to them but how they acted in response We should listen not only for justice but as a cautionary tale against repeated history
