Abstract Literature reveals that there exists a conjoining defect in the form of concrescence. However, oral surgeons usually do not contemplate the possibility of the occurrence and the implications of this rare dental anomaly while planning third molar surgery. Here, we put forth an unforeseen occurrence of concrescence between an unerupted third molar and an erupted second molar that was identified following the surgical intervention. This is intended to highlight the significance of preoperative planning as well as the contemplation of rare dental anomalies encompassing third molars during third molar surgery.

Introduction

Surgical removal of third molar is undoubtedly the most commonly performed minor oral surgical procedure [1]. Literature reveals that when the crown or root of an impacted tooth lies in close proximity to an adjacent erupted or unerupted tooth they exhibit peculiar patterns [2]. Hence, any unanticipated resistance encountered while attempting to remove a partially erupted third molar or an erupted second molar in the vicinity of an unerupted tooth should caution the surgeon pertaining to the occurrence of a concrescence [3].

Case Report

A 43-year-old healthy male patient reported with a chief complaint of pain in the upper left back tooth region since 5 days. Pain was mild, intermittent, relieved on medication and not associated with any other symptoms. Intraoral inspection revealed decayed and supraerupted upper left second molar. Palpation elicited tenderness distobuccal to the upper left second molar in the vestibular region. There was a missing lower left second molar that was removed 2 years back as a result of caries. Radiographic examination revealed an distobuccally impacted upper left third molar. Haziness was noted with regards to the radicular aspect of both the upper left second and third molars, and their root configurations could not be well appreciated. It appeared more like a tooth overlap (Fig. 1).

Considering the fact that the upper left second molar was supraerupted with radicular caries, patient was advised to undergo surgical removal of the upper left second and third molars followed by rehabilitation for his missing teeth using dental implants at a later stage. Patient consents were obtained. Procedure was planned under strict aseptic conditions following standard operating protocols.

Under local anesthesia, following surgical incision, mucoperiosteal flap was reflected and bone overlying the unerupted third molar was removed along with buccal guttering. Unanticipated resistance was encountered during luxation and elevation of the tooth out of the socket. Several means and attempts to deliver the tooth were unproductive. Hence, an attempt to remove the second molar was undertaken since it was part of the treatment plan. This led to the combined delivery of the upper second and third molars since the buccal guttering was already done for the third molar. Extracted teeth revealed concrescence involving the
