Suns Daughter:

Mapping Indigenous Presence Kathryn W. Shanley, Bjørg Evjen, 2015-05-14 Despite centuries of colonization many Indigenous peoples cultures remain distinct in their ancestral territories even in today's globalized world Yet they exist often within countries that hardly recognize their existence Struggles for political recognition and cultural respect have occurred historically and continue to challenge Native American nations in Montana and Sámi people of northern Scandinavia in their efforts to remain and thrive as who they are as Indigenous peoples In some ways the Indigenous struggles on the two continents have been different but in many other ways they are similar Mapping Indigenous Presence presents a set of comparative Indigenous studies essays with contemporary perspectives attesting to the importance of the roles Indigenous people have played as overseers of their own lands and resources as creators of their own cultural richness and as political entities capable of governing themselves This interdisciplinary collection explores the Indigenous experience of Sámi peoples of Norway and Native Americans of Montana in their respective contexts yet they are in many ways distinctly different within the body politic of their respective countries Although they share similarities as Indigenous peoples within nation states and inhabit somewhat similar geographies their cultures and histories differ significantly Sámi people speak several languages while Indigenous Montana is made up of twelve different tribes with at least ten distinctly different languages both peoples struggle to keep their Indigenous languages vital The political relationship between Sámi people and the mainstream Norwegian government and culture has historically been less contentious than that of the Indigenous peoples of Montana with the United States and with the state of Montana yet the Sámi and the Natives of Montana have struggled against both the ideology and the subsequent assimilation policy of the savagery versus civilization model The authors attempt to increase understanding of how these two sets of Indigenous peoples share important ontological roots and postcolonial legacies and how research may be used for their own self-determination and future directions

Center Places and Cherokee Towns

Christopher Bernard Rodning, 2015-08-15 Examines how architecture and other aspects of the built environment such as hearths burials and earthen mounds formed center places within the Cherokee cultural landscape In Center Places and Cherokee Towns Christopher B Rodning opens a panoramic vista onto protohistoric Cherokee culture He posits that Cherokee households and towns were anchored within their cultural and natural landscapes by built features that acted as center places Rodning investigates the period from just before the first Spanish contact with sixteenth century Native American chiefdoms in La Florida through the development of formal trade relations between Native American societies and English and French colonial provinces in the American South during the late 1600s and 1700s Rodning focuses particularly on the Coweeta Creek archaeological site in the upper Little Tennessee Valley in southwestern North Carolina and describes the ways in which elements of the built environment were manifestations of Cherokee senses of place Drawing on archaeological data delving into primary documentary sources dating from the eighteenth century and considering Cherokee myths and legends remembered and recorded during the nineteenth century Rodning shows how the arrangement of public structures and household dwellings in Cherokee towns both shaped and were shaped by Cherokee culture Center places at different scales served as points of attachment between Cherokee individuals and their communities as well as between their present and past Rodning explores the ways in which Cherokee architecture and the built environment were sources of cultural stability in the aftermath of European contact and how the course of European contact altered the landscape of Cherokee towns in the long run In this multi faceted consideration of archaeology ethnohistory and recorded oral tradition Rodning adeptly demonstrates the distinct ways that Cherokee identity was constructed through architecture and other material forms Center Places and Cherokee Towns will have a broad appeal to students and scholars of southeastern archaeology anthropology Native American studies prehistoric and protohistoric Cherokee culture landscape archaeology and ethnohistory
