Breatnach, Dublin Institute for Advanced Studies. School of Celtic Studies, 2013 Led by Brother Michael Clirigh O F M the Four Masters worked together between 1630 and 1636 to compile a series of historical tracts and records that are among the most important Irish writings from any century No part of these productions was destined to appear in print in the years following completion but in all cases autograph manuscripts have survived the intervening centuries The distinction of The Four Masters and their manuscripts is that it treats the compilers as scribes as well as chroniclers and their collaboration as combining individual endeavours capable of being differentiated through palaeographical and textual analysis The scribal styles and independent manuscript legacy of each of the two most outstanding members of the group M ch l Cl irigh and C Coigcr che Cl irigh are documented here for the first time A final chapter looks at their lives and those of their two associates Fear Feasa Maoil Chonaire and C Coigcr che Duibhgeann in in the aftermath of their joint enterprise when war and conquest impacted around them with destructive consequences for the culture and learned institutions of Gaelic Ireland
