Unhappy Returns Elizabeth Lemarchand,1977-01-01 Many Unhappy Returns Charles O. Rossotti,2005 When Charles O Rossotti became Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service in 1997 the agency had the largest customer base and the lowest approval rating of any institution in America Mired in scandal caught in a political maelstrom and beset by profound management and technology problems the IRS was widely dismissed as a hopelessly flawed enterprise In Many Unhappy Returns Rossotti the first businessperson to head the IRS recounts the remarkable story of his leadership and transformation of this much maligned agency In the glare of intense public scrutiny he effected dramatic changes in the way the IRS did business while it continued to collect 2 trillion in revenue Through fascinating accounts of heated Congressional hearings encounters with Washington bigwigs frank exchanges with taxpayers and employees and risky turnaround strategies Rossotti serves up a colorful story of leadership and change against daunting odds He also underscores why every honest taxpayer should demand reform in the broader U S tax system Infused with keen wit and hard won business wisdom Many Unhappy Returns illuminates the perils and possibilities of leading large complex organizations in a transparent world Federal Tax Return Privacy United States.
