investigate trade policies agricultural production and their impact on the environment This study focuses on the pig sector in OECD countries and considers the most appropriate forms of policy intervention It finds that production is expected to slow if not contract in OECD European and Asian countries where government support for pig production in the form of tariffs and export subsidies is generally the highest and environmental impacts on water and air pollution are of greatest concern Therefore liberalising trade is likely to generate some environmental benefits Using comparative analysis it also concludes that while manure management regulations do differ among countries the cost effect on pig producers is not significant in
