Artists of the North American Wilderness John T. Ordeman, George Browne, Michael M. Schreiber, Belmore Browne, 2003-11-01 George and Belmore Browne are together a strong and sometimes overlooked example of the integrity passion strength and grit of early landscape artists on this continent Their backdrop the rugged forbidding landscape of the Pacific Northwest and their passion for both hunting and documenting the nature around them make them both an important piece of North American cultural history And George s story in particular including his untimely death is a fascinating if tragic story of an enormous talent whose heralding is long overdue Once described as the greatest wildlife artist most people have never heard of George Browne may be regarded as one of a few legitimate masters of the wildlife genre And before him there was Belmore his father and mentor as both artist and sportsman In a brilliantly illustrated book featuring dozens of color plates of both men s paintings as well as photos of their travels authors John Ordeman and Michael Schreiber document the lives of these remarkable men of adventure and artistry Growing up in Washington State but studying in New England and later Paris Belmore was a traditional realist painter So when invited on expeditions in the Yukon and Alaska Belmore devoted himself to perfecting his painting technique with the rugged stunning landscape of the north as inspiration George spent his early years in Banff Alberta At 15 he quit school and began a rigorous apprenticeship in painting and drawing under his father He later studied at the California School of Fine Arts after his family had moved to the San Francisco Bay area A born adventurer like his father when George was drafted to the Army Air Corps during WWII he was the first man to survive a parachute jump over 40 000 feet without freezing to death His paintings of birds in flight mountain goats leaping from rock to rock and moose serene in their swamp are just as breathtaking Slip cased limited ed incl an original Browne print

Wilderness, A Journal of Quiet Adventure in Alaska Rockwell Kent, 2020-09-28 Had jesting Pilate asked What is Art he would have waited quite as many centuries for an answer as he has for the answer to his question about Truth For art to the artist and art to the rest of us are two very different things Art to the artist is quite simply Life his life of which he has an amplitude and intensity unknown to us What he does for us is to thrill us awake to the amplitude and intensity of all life our own included And this is a miracle for which we can never be thankful enough This at least is what Rockwell Kent s Alaska drawings and Alaska journal do for me they take me away from that tired absorption in things of little import which makes up most of our human life and make me see not an unreal world of romantic illusion that fool s pleasure given by the second rate artist but the real wonder world in which I live and have always lived They make me see suddenly that there is a vast deal more in the world than embittering and anxious preoccupations that much of it is fine much is comforting much awe inspiring much profoundly tragic and all of it makes up a whole so vast that no living organism need feel cramped

Choreographing the North Bridget Cauthery, 2024-12-30 Choreographing the North examines 11 contemporary dance pieces that perform northern culture landscape folklore and ideas of North The choreographers from Canada the United States the United Kingdom Belgium Luxembourg Australia and Argentina translate their real or imagined journeys to the North for stage and or screen This book examines the ways Indigenous subjects and subjectivities have been diminished and or distorted and considers how that diminishment has fuelled misrepresentation both inside and outside the field of contemporary dance Where Indigenous presence is represented in dances about the North it is as discarnate storytellers or everyman pastoral figures against backdrops of ice and snow Indigenous presence is there but it is romanticized caricatured flattened Using these works as moving texts Cauthery argues that in many regards these dances are colonizing acts that either ignore or erase the land and people upon which they are based In analyzing and deconstructing these dances this book acknowledges the land and culture based inheritances embedded in and performed through the works themselves This study will be of great interest to students and scholars in dance studies theatre and performance studies and cultural studies as well as those interested in environmental psychology human geography and the expanding field of Arctic humanities

Rodney,2002 Art in the Wilderness is a voice crying out to the artist the art historians educators politicians pastors museums art galleries and to all peoples who have a desire for justice a yearning for knowledge and the need to understand one man s struggle The struggle through his arts and his vision of the world around him speaks to us on a personal and universal level All who read this book will benefit through his courageous honest effort to see the injustices of history past and present The contents of this work begins with Ronald s formative years on the island of Trinidad and moves us to a new world where people are divided racially politically socially and even creatively as witness by the artist during his studies at the various hallowed institutions The succeeding chapters reflect Ronald s understanding of our Art History and its relationship to society However in his research he comes to realize a certain truth about the forces that governed and even shaped our understanding about art and a man s position in the world Following this path he began his own visual journey to record and express the injustices that prevail and are generally neglected by our grand aesthetic values In Blue
