

BIODIVERSITY

The 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development's vision of a sustainable and equitable future for people and planet depends on the goods and services contributed by the world's ecosystems and the biodiversity within them.

Yet over the last century, there has been an unprecedented loss of this biodiversity from habitat destruction, overexploitation, pollution, climate change, and the introduction of invasive alien species. All of these problems are the result of human activity.

A 2015 study by the UN Environment World Conservation Monitoring Centre, the Natural History Museum and British universities showed that by 2005 land-use change alone had caused a decrease of 13.6% in the average number of species found in local ecosystems, compared to the pre-industrial era. We now face sudden and irreversible change that could compromise our planet's ability to support human development. Urgent action is needed to halt this decline.

UN Environment's Biodiversity and Ecosystem Services Unit prioritizes this action, working with the Global Environment Facility (GEF) to arrest the decline in biodiversity and conserve ecosystem services for the benefit of current and future generations. We have worked together on over 350 projects, helping more than 150 countries improve and expand their action on biodiversity.

CASE STUDY

Protecting biodiversity, balancing benefits

The tiny community of Pinakota Grama Panchayat in India's rural Andhra Pradesh State is surrounded by dense tropical forest. Many of its residents earn their livelihoods from the forest, collecting or farming non-timber produce, including plants such as 'the King of Bitters' (Andrographis paniculata).

The local community has used this plant for centuries to treat conditions from stomach pain and intestinal worms to malaria and anaemias, and with the benefits of traditional herbal medicines increasingly recognised in the developed world, there is rising demand for the plants, giving the villagers the opportunity to sell their produce for cash.

Unfortunately, the residents have little control over this market and are vulnerable to unscrupulous traders who can exploit them and sell the produce to pharmaceutical companies at high margins. In addition, there is a real danger that overexploitation could result in these plants disappearing forever – both reducing the forest's genetic diversity and depriving local people of valuable medicine and income.

With GEF support, UN Environment is addressing these issues through an Access and Benefit Sharing project. Working with the Government of India in 10 states, the project is enabling equitable access to biological resources, assessing their economic value and better sharing their benefits amongst local people.

One result is the creation of local biodiversity funds. Fees are levied on those who collect the biological produce of the forest for commercial purposes. This money is used for conservation activities, such as the distribution and planting of seedlings.

"Due to the project we are able to get benefits from the resources available in our village, and the livelihoods of the people have increased," says Krupa Shamhi, chair of Pinakota Grama's new Biodiversity Management Committee, which is responsible for conserving and documenting the area's diverse flora and fauna. "We are able to avoid middlemen in resource transactions and earn more income. These benefits have helped us to work towards biodiversity conservation."

By bringing together the villagers, traders, and businesses involved in the market for herbal medicines, the project has shown that it is possible for local people to benefit from the rich biodiversity of their homeland, while still preserving these resources for generations to come.
