Thomas Cole Drawn To Nature:

Thomas Cole John R. Stilgoe, Frances F. Dunwell, 1993 Thomas Cole Drawn to Nature documents the first major exhibition on Thomas Cole organized by the Albany Institute of History Art since 1941 To Walk with Nature Howard S. Merritt, 1981 To Walk with Nature, 1982 Romantic Anti-capitalism and Nature Robert Sayre, Michael Löwy, 2019-10-16 Romantic Anti capitalism and Nature examines the deep connections between the romantic rebellion against modernity and ecological concern with modern threats to nature The chapters deal with expressions of romantic culture from a wide variety of different areas travel writing painting utopian vision cultural studies political philosophy and activist socio political writing The authors discuss a highly diverse group of figures William Bartram Thomas Cole William Morris Walter Benjamin Raymond Williams and Naomi Klein from the late eighteenth to the early twenty first century They are rooted individually in English American and German cultures but share a common perspective the romantic protest against modern bourgeois civilisation and its destruction of the natural environment Although a rich ecocritical literature has developed since the 1990s particularly in the United States and Britain that addresses many aspects of ecology and its intersection with romanticism they almost exclusively focus on literature and define romanticism as a limited literary period of the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries This study is one of the first to suggest a much broader view of the romantic relation to ecological discourse and representation covering a range of cultural creations and viewing romanticism as a cultural critique or protest against capitalist industrialist modernity in the name of past pre modern or pre capitalist values This book will be of great interest to students and scholars of ecology romanticism and the history of capitalism

Green Culture Carl George Herndl, Stuart Cameron Brown, 1996 Green Culture is about an idea the environment and how we talk about it Is the environment something simply out there in the world to be found Or is it as this book suggests a concept and a set of cultural values constructed by our use of language That language in its many forms comes under scrutiny here as distinguished authors writing from a variety of perspectives consider how our idea and our discussion of the environment evolve together and how this process results in action or inaction Listen to politicians social scientists naturalists and economists talk about the environment and a problem becomes clear dramatic differences on environmental issues are embedded in dramatically different discourses This book explores these differences and shows how an understanding of rhetoric might lead to their resolution The authors examine specific environmental debates over the Great Lakes and Yellowstone a toxic waste dump in North Carolina and an episode in Red Lodge Montana They look at how genres such as nature writing and specific works such as Rachel Carson's Silent Spring have influenced environmental discourse And they investigate the impact of cultural traditions from the landscape painting of the Hudson River School to the rhetoric of the John Birch Society on our discussions and positions on the environment Most of the scholars gathered here are also hikers canoeists climbers or bird watchers and their work reflects a deep personal interest in the natural world in connection with the human community Concerned throughout to make the methods of rhetorical analysis perfectly clear they offer readers a rare chance to see what precisely we are talking about when we talk about the environment
