Urbanization in China Houkai Wei,2018-07-30 This book traces the history of urbanization in China and discusses major problems and challenges the country is facing as it undergoes a profound social transformation The author argues that as China tries to build not just more but also better cities i.e cities that are not only economically competitive but also people and environment friendly it should adopt urbanization strategies and policies that promote integrated development for both rural and urban areas and coordination among otherwise disparate objectives such as industrialization ecological modernization informatization and cultural heritage preservation nationwide and at various scales      China's Great Urbanization Zheng Yongnian,Zhao Litao,Sarah Y. Tong,2016-10-04 China's extraordinary economic boom since the late 1970s has been accompanied by massive urbanization with the proportion of the population living in cities rising from 18% in 1978 to 54% in 2014 Currently the Chinese government has amongst its objectives the target to increase this to 60% by 2020 and also to improve the quality of China's cities This book examines a wide range of issues connected to China's urbanization It considers the many problems which have come with rapid urbanization including urban housing problems difficulties affecting rural migrants in urban areas and a lack of social protection It examines areas of current reform including land reform shanty town renewal and moves to address environmental problems It explores governance issues and throughout assesses how urbanization in China is likely to develop in future      Confronting the Challenges of Urbanization in China Zai Liang,Steven F. Messner,Youqin Huang,Cheng Chen,2016-08-05 Since the late 1970s China has experienced an unprecedented pace of urbanization In 1978 only 17.8% of the population resided in urban areas but by 2013 the level of urbanization had reached 53.8% During the same period China also enjoyed spectacular economic growth China had become the second largest economy in the world by 2012 just behind the United States. Despite China's highly acclaimed achievements in urbanization and its economic miracle, urban China confronts a set of significant challenges. This book provides theoretically informed and empirically rich analyses of some of the key challenges facing China's urbanization. The first part deals with new patterns of urbanization focusing on comprehensive measures and environmental dimensions of urbanization. The second part of the book focuses on several aspects related to migrants in cities: migrant entrepreneurship, return migration, and local people's attitudes toward migrants. The final section examines two key issues important for migrants, urban local residents, and policy makers that have become quite contentious in China today: housing and urban health care. This collection presents original cutting edge research on some of the most pressing challenges confronting contemporary urban China, conducted by researchers from multiple social science disciplines. It will appeal to scholars and advanced students of urban studies and China studies as well as those in sociology, anthropology, geography, and political science.

The urbanization process in China and its impacts on the environment Thomas Schneider, 2015-11-23. This paper reviews the urbanization process in China during the past decades and gives a prospect for the near future. It is shown that in a remarkably short period, China increased its urban population to more than 50 percent of the entire population. This rapid urbanization was mainly driven by rural-urban migration in the course of the industrialization process and by the in situ urbanization as a mainly government-related factor. The paper afterwards identifies energy and resources, pollution, and land consumption as the major areas where by urbanization caused challenges need to be tackled.

Abstract: This paper reviews the urbanization process in China during the past decades and gives a prospect for the near future. It is shown that in a remarkably short period, China increased its urban population to more than 50 percent of the entire population. This rapid urbanization was mainly driven by rural-urban migration in the course of the industrialization process and by the in situ urbanization as a mainly government-related factor. The paper afterwards identifies energy and resources, pollution, and land consumption as the major areas where by urbanization caused challenges need to be tackled.

Urban Problems and Urban Development in China Wolfgang Taubmann, 1993.

Urbanization and Party Survival in China Xiaobing Li, Xiansheng Tian, 2016-11-21. While the Chinese urban movement has successfully transferred surplus labor from the countryside to urban industries that urgently require free and cheap labor, numerous problems have arisen as a result of the unprecedented huge scale process. Such conditions such as overcrowding, substandard housing, lack of social services, corruption, and abuse of power have often reached crisis stage. American college students often ask: How does the government control the largest urban population in the world? Why do newly developed, highly commercialized cities continue to support the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) rather than challenging the old regime? What happens when urban residents have problems with a party controlled government This book collects essays from the best scholars in their fields and examines urban issues including identifying residents concerns analyzing policy problems and providing some answers to these pivotal questions They address this important topic from a Chinese American perspective through a cooperative interdisciplinary research effort among Chinese American scholars interested in the subject Their scholarship makes a significant contribution through multi faceted components from different fields such as economics political science criminal justice law anthropology sociology and education The authors introduce and explore the theory and practice of policy patterns political systems and social institutions by identifying key issues in Chinese government and society contained within the larger framework of the international sphere Originally from Beijing Shanghai Xi an Tianjin and other cities in China these authors have received training and advanced degrees from American universities and colleges thus bringing uncommon perspective and conclusions by focusing on urban studies specific to China Their endeavors move beyond the existing scholarship and seek to spark new debates and proposed solutions while reflecting on established schools of history religion linguistics and gender studies Crucial to this volume is the assessment of historical and empirical data found in these essays that place major events in the context of Chinese tradition its culture and national security Using comprehensive coverage to create a broad and solid foundation of knowledge this collection presents a better understanding of the current Chinese metropolitan climate and includes legitimate issues with city policy implementation China's Urbanization Chaolin Gu,2024-11-19 This book tries to root its exploration of China s urbanization in the very local realities of China from the perspective of urban geography and international urbanization theory The research is of large scale full process and boasts the feature of multidimensional and systematic thinking In order clearly illustrate the full dimensions of China s urbanization each chapter presents series of well designed figures and tables to enhance the book s readability and clarity This book can be used as a reference for scholars and decision makers who are engaged or interested in China s urbanization policy urban and regional planning and socioeconomic transformation China Urbanizes Shahid Yusuf,Anthony Saich,2008-01-22 The key challenges facing China in the next two decades derive from the ongoing process of urbanization China s urbanization rate in 2005 was about 43% Over the next 10 15 years it is expected to rise to well over 50% adding an additional 200 million mainly rural migrants to the current urban population of 560 million How China copes with such a large migration flow will strongly influence rural urban inequality the pace at which urban centers expand their economic performance and the urban environment The growing population will necessitate a big push strategy to maintain a high rate of investment in housing and the urban physical infrastructure and urban services To finance such expansion will require a significant strengthening and diversification of China s financial system Growing cities will greatly increase consumption of energy and water Containing this without at the same time constraining the economic performance of cities or the improvement in the standards of living will call for enlightened policies strategies careful urban planning and significant technological advances This volume identifies the key developments to watch and discusses the policies which would affect the course as well as the fruitfulness of change

China's New Urbanization Strategy China Development Research Foundation,2013-04-02 Urbanization is one of the major challenges facing China Of China s 1 3 billion people around half still live in rural areas There has been huge migration from rural areas to cities in recent years a trend that is likely to continue strong for some time The strains that this vast migration puts on China s cities are enormous This book makes available for the English speaking reader the results of a large group of research projects undertaken by CDRF one of China s leading think tanks into the details of rural urban migration the resulting urban growth and the problems associated with all this The book goes on to put forward a new strategy which aims to ensure that China s urbanization proceeds in an orderly manner and that people and their needs are put at the centre of the strategy Key parts of the strategy include that city clusters should become the main form of urbanization that these should be arranged geographically in a pattern of two horizontal lines and three vertical lines that industrial and employment structures should highlight regional features and diversity that urban public services should be more equitably distributed that there should be new forms of urbanization management and city governance to accelerate urbanization and ensure harmonious social development and that the whole process should be conducted in an ecological green way

Urban China World Bank,2014-07-29 In the last 30 years China s record economic growth lifted half a billion people out of poverty with rapid urbanization providing abundant labor cheap land and good infrastructure While China has avoided some of the common ills of urbanization strains are showing as inefficient land development leads to urban sprawl and ghost towns pollution threatens people s health and farmland and water resources are becoming scarce With China s urban population projected to rise to about one billion or close to 70 percent of the country s population by 2030 China s leaders are seeking a more coordinated urbanization process Urban China is a joint research report by a team from the World Bank and the Development Research Center of China s State Council which was established to address the challenges and opportunities of urbanization in China and to help China forge a new model of urbanization The report takes as its point of departure the conviction that China s urbanization can become more efficient inclusive and sustainable However it stresses that achieving this vision will require strong support from both government and the markets for policy reforms in a number of area The report proposes six main areas for reform first amending land management institutions to foster more efficient land use denser cities modernized agriculture and more equitable wealth distribution second adjusting the hukou household registration system to increase labor mobility and provide urban migrant workers equal access to a common standard of public services third placing urban finances on a more sustainable footing while fostering financial discipline among local governments fourth improving urban planning to enhance connectivity and encourage scale and agglomeration economies fifth reducing environmental pressures through more efficient resource management and sixth improving governance at the local level

urbanization should not be evaluated solely in terms of adequate infrastructures but also in their ability to implement sound governance practices to ensure social environmental and economic development This book addresses several key challenges faced by Chinese cities based on the most recent policies and experiments adopted by central and local governments The contributors offer an interdisciplinary analysis of the urbanization process in China and examine the following key topics the institutional foundations of Chinese cities the legal status of the land the rural to urban migration the preservation of the urban heritage and the creation of urban community and the competitiveness of Chinese cities They define the current issues and challenges emerging from China s urbanization Students and academics of urban studies and related subjects will find the strong theoretical backgrounds to be of use to their research Policy makers and other practitioners will benefit from the practical advice and recommendations

Urbanizing China Gregory Guldin, 1992-04-30 Can China now be considered urbanized Unlike earlier studies that viewed China as a peasant or rural society this book focuses on the question of whether China is already urbanized Each of the contributors considers the degree to which the town country dichotomy has been obliterated in the China of the 1980s and 1990s The focus is unique for previous studies have failed to raise this fundamental question The contributors to the volume who are from China Hong Kong the United States and Canada collectively address

China's past and continuing transformation the multiple factors influencing the urbanization of Chinese society and the strengths and weaknesses in China's transformation China's urbanization the authors claim can be traced to two successful development strategies small town development and coastal economic reforms These strategies however raise the question of how China should deal with uneven and inequitable regional growth China's solution Guldin says has been to mix economic liberalization and an emphasis on small town development with a still significant degree of central planning The work is interdisciplinary with contributions from the fields of sociology geography anthropology and urban planning It should be of interest to scholars from all of those disciplines with a special interest in China

30 Years of Urban Change in China's 10 Core Cities Ali Cheshmehzangi, Tian Tang, 2024-12-02 As a continuation of our award winning book China's City Cluster Development in the Race to Carbon Neutrality this book covers China's major urban changes over the last 30 years Unlike the previous book where we highlighted regional development issues this book explicitly explores the city cases particularly those that are considered core cities in China Based on the micro historical analysis of China's urbanization trend and urban development patterns we see that cities in China have played a significant role in driving the country's sustainable development agenda In a way they have had both positive and negative impacts on achieving sustainable development We look at these last three decades mainly because during this period China's urbanization became unprecedented the central government made several pledges and signed many international agreements related to sustainable development and China grew rapidly to become the second global economic power Aligned with the overarching Belt and Road Initiative BRI and the more recent Carbon Neutrality Plan CNP Chinese core cities played a significant part in regional development urban rural relations industrial clustering the development of free trade zones and special economic zones etc All these recent developments are due to China's ongoing urbanization and urban development 30 Years of Urban Change in China's 10 Core Cities is a mapping study of China's core cities and their changes over three decades of rapid urbanization urban growth and economic development We explicitly highlight each selected city's development trends sustainable development plans and major strategies In this Volume out of our two connected volumes we summarise lessons learnt from all 10 case study examples and we hope they can be utilized for other developing and rapidly urbanizing nations We expect this book to be a valuable resource for local governments authorities urban planners urbanists practitioners developers and urban researchers We trust China is no longer a developing country and much of these recent progressions are owed to its structured urban development strategies robust governmental structure and progressive attitude to growth and development Hence this topic coverage at the point where China's urbanization is shifting to high quality urbanization is essential and beneficial to multiple stakeholders
