When Teachers Face Themselves:

When Teachers Face Themselves Arthur T. Jersild, 1955 This book is concerned with the strivings satisfactions hopes and heartaches that pervade the teacher's life and work It is based in part on a study of more than 1000 teachers and students of education Professor Jersild writes with disarming lucidity about many abstruse conceptions He has the courage to discuss forthrightly important topics that are generally skirted in discussions about education I believe that When Teachers Face Themselves will help any but the most recalcitrant reader to face himself more realistically From the Foreword by Stephen M Corey Director Horace Mann Lincoln Institute of School Experimentation
