

Upper Atmosphere

The Earth's atmosphere has four primary layers: the troposphere, stratosphere, mesosphere, and thermosphere. These layers protect our planet by absorbing harmful radiation.

Thermosphere

85-575 Miles

In the Thermosphere, molecules of oxygen and nitrogen are ionized by solar radiation and cosmic particles from the Sun, creating the ionosphere. In spite of the fact ionization there is creating heat, the Thermosphere decreases in temperature with altitude because the atoms, oxygen and nitrogen cannot collide to heat the this structure.

Mesosphere

50-85 Miles

During the mesosphere it is possible to see shooting stars that originate in the Earth's atmosphere and they have longer than lifetime there. The mesosphere is responsible to most changes in atmospheric density and composition. It could provide them to scientists, and it also could provide them to meteorologists in a change in temperature that is more responsible to the atmosphere.

Stratosphere

10-50 Miles

The lower layer has within the mesosphere and stratosphere exhibits heat by the Sun.

Troposphere

0-10 Miles

The Troposphere is the layer of the Earth's atmosphere where all human activity takes place.

Aeronomy of Ice in the Mesosphere (AIM)

AIM's primary focus is the Mesosphere (50) within our normally warm night sky. The AIM satellite is the first satellite to be launched into space that has over 1000 km of altitude to fly and a temperature to cool to into upper stratosphere.

Ionosphere

The ionosphere is a layer of plasma formed by the ionization of atomic oxygen and nitrogen by highly energetic ultraviolet and cosmic rays. It extends from the ionosphere to the bottom of the atmosphere up to the magnetosphere. This layer varies daily in the daytime compared to solar radiation causes the ionization of the atoms, but can extend down as far as the ionosphere. However, these upper atmospheric layers are still mostly neutral, with only one in a million particles becoming charged daily. At night, the ionosphere usually collapses in the dark, but still contains ionized atoms caused by cosmic radiation.

Balloons, Balloons, and Satellites

AIM scientists use balloons to collect in-situ measurements in the atmosphere. However, the mesosphere and thermosphere are too high for balloons to reach, so scientists use instruments on sounding balloons and satellites to gather more detailed measurements of the upper atmosphere.

Communication

A unique property of the ionosphere is that it can reflect short-wave radio waves, enabling communication over great distances by "bouncing" signals off the actual atmosphere layer. Variability of the ionosphere can interrupt satellite communication, such as errors in GPS signals for commercial air navigation. During solar storms, this layer can even shut down communication between ground stations and satellites.

Noctilucent Clouds in the Mesosphere

Evidence of change in the behavior of noctilucent clouds has been observed by the AIM mission. Recent data show dramatically less in one context, leading scientists to speculate about changes in weather conditions and pole-to-pole atmospheric circulation.

BARREL

The Ballot Army for Radiation-Induced Relativistic Electron Losses (BARREL) is a balloon-based mission to expand the measurements of NASA's STEP spacecraft. BARREL seeks to measure the precipitation of relativistic electrons from the ionosphere belts during two multi-balloon campaigns operated in the Southern Hemisphere.
