World Development Report 1981

Peter E. Coughlin, Gerrishon K. Ikiara

World Development Report 1981:

World Development Report 1981, 1981 This is the fourth in the World Bank's annual series assessing key development issues. Adjustment, global and national, to promote sustainable growth in the changing world economy is the main theme of this report. Recession and inflation in the industrial countries, together with the rise in oil prices, have been the main forces at work in the world economy in the 1970s. The report examines their effect on developing countries to see how adjustment has been managed and what lessons may be learned for the 1980s. Adjustment occurs through international trade and capital flows and through changes in national production and consumption patterns. The earlier chapters of the report present global and regional projections for the 1980s and consider international aspects of adjustment in trade, energy, and finance. It then turns to adjustment problems of different groups of developing countries and a consideration of the prospects for human development. The report also includes the 1981 World Development Indicators, a set of 25 tables of economic and social indicators for 124 countries.

The Politics of Global Competitiveness Paul Cammack, 2022 Marx predicted in Capital 1867 that as capitalism became global, patterns of work would be transformed and workers would need to develop versatility, flexibility, and mobility. This general law of social production, as he called it, is now in evidence all around us in global value chains, zero-hour contracts, and contract work organised through digital platforms. It results from competition between capitalists, scientific and technological revolutions in production, and incessant advances in the division of labour as production processes are broken down into ever smaller steps. This book documents the leading roles of the Paris-based Organisation for Economic Cooperation and Development and the Washington-based World Bank as advocates of these developments. They do not, as generally supposed, simply represent the interests of the advanced economies or the West and their transnational corporations. They promote a single global model of capitalist development without limits and on a genuinely global scale. It calls upon all states to adjust continually to the structural and social demands of competitiveness, which they see as essential to the global hegemony of capital over labour. The OECD and the World Bank propose policies that give girls and women equal access to education and paid work, reform welfare to make work pay, introduce flexible labour contracts that make hiring and firing easier, focus education on skills that boost employability, and draw workers in the developing world from the informal sector into the formal sector where they can be more productive. This is the politics of global competitiveness.

World Development Report 1981 Word Dvlpn, World Bank Group, 1981-09-01 Innovating Development Strategies in Africa Landry Signé, 2017-08-31 During the second half of the twentieth century, African states shifted away from state-led development strategies and are now moving towards a strategy of regional economic integration. In this book, Landry Signé explores the key drivers of African policy and economic transformation, proposing a preeminent explanation of policy innovations in Africa through the examination of postcolonial strategies for economic development. Scholars and practitioners in fields as varied as development studies, political science, and public policy, economics, sociology, and African studies will benefit from Sign s unprecedented comparative analysis including detailed cases from the often understudied Francophone Africa First studying why how and when institutional or policy change occurs in Africa Sign explores the role of international regional and national actors in making African economic development strategies from 1960 to date highlighting the economic transformations of the twenty first century World Development Report ,1991 This report synthesizes and interprets the lessons of more than forty years of development experience Together with last year s report on poverty and next year s on the environment it seeks to provide a comprehensive overview of the development agenda The 1990s began with dramatic changes as many countries in Eastern Europe and elsewhere initiated ambitious reforms of their economic and political systems Against the backdrop of these transitions this report links the historical debates that counseled policymakers in their past decisions the lessons of experience and the evolving thought on how best to proceed One of the most valuable lessons relates to the interaction between the state and the market in fostering development It describes a market friendly approach in which governments allow markets to function well and in which governments concentrate their interventions on areas in which markets prove inadequate The report looks at four main aspects of the relationship between governments and markets a investing in people b the climate for enterprises to flourish c the integration of countries with the global economy and d a stable macroeconomic foundation for sustained progress The report stresses that above all the future of developing countries is in their own hands Domestic policies and institutions hold the key to successful development Industrialization in Kenya Peter E.
